NATIONAL FARMERS' UNION ADJOURNS AT TEXARKANA

Texarkana, Ark., Sept. 11.—The National Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, which has been in session here since last Wednesday, completed its labors and adjourned Saturday night.

Among the resolutions passed were the following:

To memorialize congress to give to the rural school districts of the South the cotton tax of $65,000,000 collected unjustly and illegally in 1861-65.

Urging members to purchase only union-made goods bearing the union label, and declaring in favor of a parcel post. This last was adopted unanimously amid much enthusiasm.

A resolution was also adopted inviting the farmers "engaged in cotton growing and grain growing to meet with the Farmers' Co-operative Business association at Topeka, Kan., Oct. 22, to devise ways and means of extending our trade relations that we may deal with each other more directly and in this way dispense with the gambler and speculator that is now operating between us."

A practically new constitution was adopted and will be submitted for approval of all the members of the union at a referendum vote to be taken between the hours of 1 o'clock and 12 o'clock p. m., Nov. 24.

By this new constitution the name of the organization is changed to the Farmers' National Union and the qualifications for membership are fixed. White persons and Indians of both sexes over 16 years of age are eligible to membership, but negroes will not be admitted. Merchants, lawyers and members of trusts and combines are barred.

Editors who will sign a pledge to sustain and support the cause of the union in the columns of their papers are eligible to become members.

The referendum is provided for and may be invoked on any measure at any time on petition of 5 per cent of the members of the organization.

Any state having within its territory a total membership of 5000 is entitled to a charter entitling it to organize a state union. The officers of the national union are to be president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and board of directors, and are to be elected annually.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows: President, C. S. Barret, Atwater, Ga.; vice president, J. E. Montgomery, Cleeson, Tenn.; secretary-treasurer, R. H. McCullough, Bebee, Ark.

Board of directors: W. A. Morris, W. S. Miller, Texas; J. N. McAllester, Indiana; Campbell Russell, Oklahoma; James Butler, Kansas.

An order was made that the existing union in Oklahoma may not organize any new locals, but may continue to collect dues from such as have already been organized under its charter. Indian Territory, however, may continue to organize new locals.

A union press association was organized with Ben I. Griffin, of Arkansas, president, and Homer Higgs, of Tennessee, secretary.

The Jesse Rally.

Democratic spellbinders James Griggsby and J. W. Bolen, accompanied by W. S. Kerr, and N. T. Hird, Dr. Truax and Col. Boland of Stonewall, went to Jesse Monday night to be in attendance at a Democratic rally. It had been reported that erstwhile citizen of Ada, W. J. Baugh had seduced some of the good citizens of that community into the Socialist fold, but the boys say that information was wrong and that Bro. Baugh occupies at Jesse about the same lonely pedestal that he did at Ada. Jesse's Democracy is on straight.

Warning Order.

All householders and owners of vacant lots in Ada are warned that they must comply with the ordinance and cut the weeds on their premises and the sidewalks and alleys adjacent thereto. I have imperative orders from the mayor, and unless the ordinance is complied with at once I positively will arrest all violators and bring them before the mayor's court.

PARENTS OF THE FOUNDLING ARE LOCATED AT ROFF

Through the account in the News of the finding of a baby in a thicket near Abe Crow's place some weeks ago, the parents have been located, arrested, confessed to the crime and now languish in the federal jail.

Something like five months ago Cora Foster of Roff, was married to Robt. Lane of the same place. On August 4 a child was born to the couple, which fact was kept quiet by the parties concerned. During this time Lane was in Oklahoma and had not seen the infant. The child was born at the home of Mrs. Foster, mother of the girl, at whose house the couple resided. Dreading the sting of disgrace and consequent village gossip attending the event, Mrs. Foster maintained a silence of the birth, and during the two weeks the child remained in her home became very much attached to it.

Lane came to Ada from Oklahoma on August 19. He hired a team and buggy of J. W. Thompson and drove to Roff. Arriving there late at night he secretly brought away his wife and baby, driving towards Ada. When near the Abe Crow place, the unnatural mother carefully tucked the little one in a blanket, handed the tiny bundle to Lane who deposited it in the clump of bushes where it was found fifteen hours later.

Lane and his wife then came to Ada, left the team at the stable and took a room at the Byrd hotel. The next day they returned to Roff. When questioned by Mrs. Foster, the girl's mother, as to the whereabouts of the infant, both were dumb as oysters and refused to say a word on the subject. Having shielded her daughter in her disgrace Mrs. Foster could not make the disappearance of the infant public, but when she saw the account in the News of how a baby was found, the description of its clothing and the cost mark on the garments, she knew that the little one was of her blood and Tuesday phoned the officers here of the facts and asked that the couple be apprehended.

Lane was a witness in the Foster-Smithers case and came to Ada Tuesday morning. He was met at the train by Office Deputy Brents and placed under arrest. When confronted with the garments worn by the little foundling, and the evidence, he confessed to the crime.

Deputy Cummings then boarded the train for Roff and placed Mrs. Lane under arrest. When informed that her husband had confessed she corroborated his statement.

Lane was formerly in the employ of D. B. Bradshaw, a merchant of Roff, whose cost mark was found on the garments worn by the baby found.

At 4 o'clock the preliminary hearing of the couple began before Judge Wixen. The youthful prisoners were terrified and when Mrs. Crow appeared with the baby in her arms Lane broke down and wept like a baby, while Mrs. Lane bore up more bravely.

The hearing is progressing as we go to press.

UNPRECEDENTED RAINFALL VISITS ADA TUESDAY NIGHT

With scarcely a drop of rain at Francis and the stars twinkling brightly all night at Mill Creek Ada people, Tuesday night, witnessed the heaviest fall of rain known to the oldest inhabitant. For nearly five hours the heavens wept copious tears, water came down in sheets and at times one could scarcely discern an arc light 100 feet distant. The lightning played incessantly and the peals of thunder sounded not unlike the report of two mighty opposing armies.

Much danger resulted in the city. Every bridge on the branch in the western section of Ada was swept away save one, on North Broadway, and the approaches to it are such that vehicles cannot cross.

The electric light plant was put out of commission shortly after midnight. Water filled the belt pits thus loosing the cement holdings on the belts.

At the Frisco depot the water at one time was level with the platform and debris was piled up against the freight house.

NOTES OF THE STORM.

Thousands of sparrows were drowned. The ground in many places was literally covered with their bodies. S. W. Hill gathered nearly a bushel basket of the dead birds.

Lightning struck the homes of Lem Mitchell, W. T. Cox, James Perry and B. F. Liebert, but slight damage was done at each place.

Something over six inches of water found its way into the Harris hotel kitchen and dining room. The patrons of the house assisted in the bailing.

The family of C. H. Fisk, living on West Fourteenth street, were removed from the house as the water rose to the floor. Mr. Fisk waded through the flood up to his waist band.

The building of the Crystal Ice Cream Co., was flooded to a depth of twenty inches.

Parties living in a small green house just west of the Ada machine shop, had a narrow escape. Water rose to tops of the beds and the women and children were rescued from these positions.

Sandy, this forenoon, lacked two feet of being up to high water mark, but was rising rapidly at that time. Two bridges, one just completed a few days ago, are gone.

The flood was ten inches deep in John McKoy's house.

ST. LOUIS PAYS HOMAGE TO THE GREAT COMMONER

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 12.—William J. Bryan received in St. Louis Tuesday the greatest of all the ovations which Missouri Democrats have tendered him in the last ten years.

Fifteen thousand persons packed the vast auditorium of the Coliseum at 8 o'clock and as many thousands clamored vainly outside for admission.

It was a sweltering, perspiring mass of humanity, but neither the jam nor the heat nor the manifold discomforts could lessen the ardor of their enthusiasm for the great commoner, returned once more to his own estate.

When Mr. Bryan appeared the great audience broke forth into cheers that even his magnetic hand was powerless to still. For full fifteen minutes the tumult continued. 15,000 throats, 30,000 hands and 10,000 flags affording such demonstration as the great Nebraska has seldom received. National committeeman William A. Rothwell essayed in vain to make an introductory address. The cries of "Bryan! Bryan!" drowned his voice, and finally he was compelled to desist and allow Bryan to take the stage.

If there had been doubt as to Bryan's popularity in St. Louis it must have been dissipated today, for from the time he arrived at the Union Station at 7:30 until the time he retired to-night's appearance in St. Louis was one prolonged ovation. Mr. Bryan was followed by a cheering, howling crowd, which formed an informal procession and cheered him as he passed through the most strenuous day he has spent since his return to America.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Indian Arbitrator Speaks of Weaver.

It is with great pleasure that we announce the fact that Carlton Weaver, of the Ada Daily and Weekly News, is a candidate for the office of delegate to the constitutional convention from the Eighty-seventh district, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

The subject of this sketch was born at Mt. Vernon, Texas, 25 years ago. He worked on his father's farm until he was 17 years of age, when he moved to the Territory, first locating at Pauls Valley, where he divided his time equally between school and farm work. In the spring of 1900 he moved to Ada, then an inland village, and for a year was in the employ of Reed & Fullerton, general merchants. During the following year, 1901, he did any kind of labor he could find to do, anything, in fact, that would assist him in keeping soul and body together, and it was in the fall of this year that the writer, who was then doing time on the Ada Star to the tune of $6 a week, had the pleasure of forming Mr. Weaver's acquaintance. At this particular time he was engaged at a lime kiln out west of town, but, after much persuasion and a long line of "air castle" construction, induced him to lay aside his overalls and hickory shirt, don a pair of speckled trousers and a hard boiled hat and engage with us in the newspaper business, which he did. The plant of the Ada Weekly News, which had recently been moved here from Center, was purchased from the proprietor, A. E. Baker, of Pauls Valley, and it was during our connection with him in this enterprise that we learned of his harmoniously blended character, temperate habits and high moral attributes.

After 18 months had passed, he assumed sole control of the News, and under his management the enterprise grew and prospered. In September, 1904, his brother, Otis Weaver, assumed the management of the paper, and Carlton satisfied a long cherished ambition to resume and finish his school work. He went to Indianapolis, Indiana, and matriculated in the university of that city. He had paid his fees and been properly enrolled, when a negro was admitted to the institution, and, of course, Weaver balked. He proclaimed his indignation from the house tops, denounced the school and its faculty, and caught the first train for Dixie, landing at the Kentucky University, where he entered and accomplished a most successful year's work, being unanimously selected as president of his class.

The following year he did not return to the state of his father's nativity, but entered the university of the new state in which he has cast his lot, at Norman, Oklahoma. At this place he was also awarded signal honor, being chosen president of his class of sixty-eight members during his first year. He was one of the two victorious debaters chosen from the university to represent Oklahoma in the Inter-collegiate Debate against Kansas last May. Oklahoma secured the unanimous decision.

During his university career he gave special attention to political science, economics and argumentation, and was the unanimous choice for the presidency of the well known Oklahoma State University Democratic club. As far as his Democracy is concerned, it cannot be questioned in the least, and at the present time he is serving as secretary of the Ada precinct Democratic club.

Mr. Weaver's declaration of principles, which appear in this issue, are open for inspection, and will stand the test of the most critical politician. He touches all the important issues in which most of the people are interested, and all have the clean, clear-cut ring. The story of his experience at Indianapolis, as related above, is sufficient evidence that he stands for a white man's government and would fight to the last ditch for separate schools, separate coaches and separate waiting rooms—three things that the Democracy of this country absolutely demand.

Mr. Weaver makes this race in response to a petition signed by a hundred or more staunch citizens of this city as well as the personal solicitation of a host of friends. His character needs no additional comment, for it is an open book. His life has been a ceaseless protest against the dominant tendencies of our contemporary era—the narrowing greed of gold, the relentless materialism, the decadence of courtesy in high places and the all prevailing secular and commercial standard. In regard to these cardinal points of a Christian civilization we believe that Mr. Weaver is able to comprehend the top-notch ideal of the voters of this district, and if selected as the Democratic nominee, the path of those who oppose him will be strewn with anything but roses.

BOGUS OR REAL REFORMERS?

There has been a good deal of controversy as to whether the present Administration leaders are bogus, or real reformers. The suspicion that Mr. Roosevelt has been playing reformer, while doing nothing to really control the trusts and corporations, rests on evidence that is quite strong enough to cause a grand jury to bring in a true bill. Reformers, like other people, must be judged by what they do, rather than by what they say or write.

Up to the present time the reforms attempted by Mr. Roosevelt are all "up in the air," they may materialize in the future, if he sticks to them manfully and does not back down when confronted with obstacles, as he has done in the tariff revision reform. He starts new political reforms constantly, but when the old party bosses show him that to carry these reforms out would split or disintegrate the G. O. P., Mr. Roosevelt gets discouraged and backs water.

But as a reformer of other than republican politics, Mr. Roosevelt is more stable, he has just ordered the introduction of spelling reform in his department of the government and as there will be no reason for the Republican politicians to object to that reform, for most of them are quite likely to spell in the phonetic way as by the rules of the dictionary, they will be glad to see Mr. Roosevelt amuse himself in that way instead of other reforms that are more dangerous to the party.

For instance, a sentence of the President's Message to Congress this fall may contain this: The brazen standpatters are contempt and hush! and should be suppressed for their wilful ardor for the frenzied fantasy of protection. I recommend that every dash schedule be stripped of its woful and lachrymal injustice. If this accurate tariff is not discuss and lopt off at this session, the dash! Democrats will have you whipt to a frazzle in the next Congress.

Now that is something like reform.

MR. OLIVER'S prophecy that Ada people would yet be brought to their knees, was partially verified Tuesday night when people in the lower sections of the town spent some hours on their knees caking the cracks at the bottom of the doors.

If it rained forty days and forty nights during Noah's time, the people would not have been safe sitting on the moon had Jupiter Pluvius kept up his licks half the time as he did Tuesday night.

THE Ada city marshal should make a vigorous war on the tramp canines of this town, and this should be kept up until not one of the ravenous hyenas is left. They are of no more advantage to the city than rats and should be destroyed for the very same reason that rats are destroyed. It has become so that one is almost afraid to step out of the house after dark. The dog catcher should get busy.

ODD POINT IN AUTO CASE.

Relatives of Victim Hold Motorist Who Raised Dust Partly to Blame for Accident.

Paris.—A curious point in an action against a motor car driver came before the judges of the French chamber. It was a question as to whether a chauffeur who had raised dust could be proceeded against for homicide for carelessness.

On May 1 last an automobile passed a cyclist on the road between Melun and Paris. The car raised a cloud of dust, with the result that the cyclist could not see his way. His machine swerved, and he was overtaken by another motor car, which knocked him down and killed him.

Could the driver of the first car, which had raised a cloud of dust, be held responsible for the accident caused by the second car? The case came before the Corbeil court, which imposed a fine of $200 on the driver of the second car, besides compelling him to pay $600 compensation. But the driver of the car which caused the dust to fly was acquitted, and his claim for $40 for being unjustifiably prosecuted was allowed against the family of the cyclist who was killed. This decision was appealed against.

BODY GIVEN TO COLLEGE.

Aged Convict's Request Carried Out by Prison Authorities at Michigan City, Ind.

Michigan City, Ind.—The body of the dead life convict, James Blackwood, who was the oldest inmate of the state prison, was taken to the Valparaiso college for dissection by the medical department.

Blackwood died in the prison hospital after serving 18 years behind the prison bars. He had been here since the transfer from Jeffersonville in 1887.

As Blackwood was dying there stood beside his cot James L. Myers, the murderer who was given a pardon by Gov. Hanly. Myers was found praying for the dying convict when the glad tidings of the pardon came to his ears.

Blackwood served 18 years for a murder in Clay county in 1887. All that remains of his family is a son residing in Texas. The son was notified after death, but made no reply.

The crime for which James Blackwood was sentenced occurred while a party was returning from a dance in Benwood, Clay county, to Cardonia. Blackwood quarreled with his wife. In the fight which followed the woman was knocked down and sustained four broken ribs. She was wrapped in a bundle of straw and left by the roadside, where she was found in the morning. She died soon after. Blackwood pleaded guilty and was sentenced by the late Judge Coffey, of Brazil.

RIGHT TO THE LETTER.

American Purchaser of Silver in London Is Served with Accuracy.

A New Yorker was once referring to the stolidity and literal-mindedness of the British shopkeeper, when he was reminded of an amusing experience of a friend in London, relates Success Magazine.

The American had been making several purchases in a jewelry establishment, among others a silver set, and finding that he had with him insufficient funds to defray the entire cost, he desired the clerk to send the set to his hotel, marked "C. O. D."

Due note was made by the clerk, but when the articles arrived at the hotel the purchaser was surprised to find that no charges had been collected. Opening the package the American was dumfounded to discover that each piece of silver had been carefully engraved, in a beautiful monogram, "C. O. D."

The Ten Virgins.

Evangelist Trimble spoke on the parable of the Ten Virgins at the Christian church Tuesday night. He made it plain to his hearers that the parable applies directly to church members. He said in substance:

"This scripture does not say that the kingdom of Heaven shall be like the five wise virgins, and the outside world like the five foolish. The kingdom, the church, is likened unto the five foolish as much as unto the five wise virgins. 'The foolish virgins at one time were ready for the coming of the bridegroom, but did not continue in a state of preparation. They sought oil, not because their lamps had never been lighted, but because they had gone out. This parable is given to teach us that we may be ready at one time in our lives, and wholly without preparation when death comes.

"While this parable applies directly to church members, I want to say a few words to those who have never been ready.

"You are all going forth. The meeting is inevitable. You all expect to enjoy the great feast that God has prepared for you. The greatest tragedy ever enacted in the human heart, will be enacted when one who said as a boy, Heaven shall be my home, and said it again as a young man, and as an old man there was still a ray of hope, but when he comes before the Judge to hear that awful sentence, every ray of hope will be swept away.

"That that made the unfortunate rich man more uncomfortable than anything else was the memory of unimproved opportunities. He called for one to be sent from the dead to tell his brethren just what he should have told them. When the Lord calls upon us to remember, may there be no memories of evil deeds, of unimproved opportunities to disturb us for an eternity."

Will Play in Own Back Yard.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 12.—The Oklahoma and Indian Territory Republican executive committees held a conference Tuesday for the purpose of amalgamating the two committees. The Oklahoma committee appointed a committee of three to wait on Indian Territory to consider the amalgamation. The Indian Territory committee agreed to amalgamation if given the chairmanship. This was refused, and it was decided to postpone any further action along this line until after the constitutional convention.

Charles Filson, on account of being territorial secretary, resigned the chairmanship of the Oklahoma committee and was succeeded by Jake Hamon, of Lawton. About one hundred distinguished politicians are attracted here as a result of the conference.

Letter to Mr. J. R. Young, Ada, I. T.

Dear Sir: The cheapest thing in the way of sending anything over the world is a postage stamp; and the cheapest way to shed water is paint. Not whitewash; paint. Do you happen to know—it don't belong to your business to know about paint, you know—do you happen to know that most of the makers of paint stuff it out with lime and clay and sand and water and air?

They do stuff it out in the can; but not on the house. They make more gallons to sell or to buy; more money to pay for paint; more money to pay for putting it on; a good deal more money to pay for putting it on; but no more beauty; more rust; decay; disappointment; loss.

Devote is your paint, because it's all paint, no sham and full-measure.

Yours truly

HE RAIDS A "FENCE."

(Copyright, 1906, by The Century Co.)
(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Great was the day that Policeman Barney Flynn raided a "fence." But, of course, he never would have done it if he had not been properly prompted by his wife. Like many another man, Policeman Flynn does not go out hunting for trouble and work, and it takes a certain amount of feminine sarcasm and criticism to make him even reasonably ambitious. But once roused to action, there is no man on "th' force" who can surpass him in either resourcefulness or nerve.

"Oho! I've found a fence," he announced joyously to his wife one night. "What'll ye do with it?" demanded Mrs. Flynn.

"What'll I do with it?" repeated Policeman Flynn. "What d'ye sup-pose? Is it ye-er idee that I'll give it ye fr to put r-round ye-er ga-ar-den?" "It is a shtrang conception ye ha-ave iv me official juties an' th' worries iv me daily toll. I pray-some ye think 't is a shbone fence with filagree wor-rk on th' in'a gate, but ye're wr-rong. This fence is a pla-ace where sholen goods is nego-shated fr' ha-ard cash."

"Did ye l'ave thim at th' station?" asked Mrs. Flynn.

"L'ave what?" inquired Policeman Flynn. "Th' goods?"

"No; th' min. They's min that r-runs th' fence, iv coorse. Did ye get thim?"

"Ye'd like fr to be a widdy, w'd ye?" retorted Policeman Flynn, somewhat warmly. "Ye'd like to ha-ave me go fernist in or twelve despr't min an' come home lukkin' like a Fourth-July target in a shootin'-gal'ry, so's ye c'd put on ye-er black d'ress an' ha-ave livery wan ca-stin' eyes at ye an' sayin', 'There goes th' widdy iv th' bra-ave po-lis-man that was planted awa-ay with siviln pounds iv lead in him.' But I'll not give ye th' chanst. I'll rap-poor th' fac's at r-roll call an' l'ave th' capt'in plan th' raid."

"Ha-and over th' gun ye're carryin', Barney," said Mrs. Flynn, with decision.

"Fr' why?" asked Policeman Flynn. "Ye don't need it," answered his wife, with infinite sarcasm. "T is you that knows too well how to ta-ake care fr ye-erself iver to ha-ave call fr a gun."

Policeman Flynn winced, but he too well knew the danger and difficulties of such a raid to be readily brought to his wife's view of the matter.

"T w'd be like takin' wan's own life fr to go in there alone," he protested.

"Surpr-ise thim," advised Mrs. Flynn. "Ye know they's a fence there, ye know they's min comes there to l'ave goods, ye know th' ma-an that fa-and thim behind th' ba-ars 'll be mentioned in th' po-lis orders an' 'll be a gr-rat ma-an at th' station, an' ye know ye'll niver be heard if ye let some wan ilse do th' wor-rk. T is fr ye to ma-ake a showin' fr ye-erself."

"Tis a post-mortim showin' I'd be ma-akin' fr meself," returned the patrolman, ruefully. "Ye don't under-shsta and th' case. T is not th' fence alone, but th' gang that l'aves th' goods there, that's to be r-rounded up, an' 't is a despr't cr-rwd. T is only me juty to me sooper-er officer to rap-poor in a case like this."

"T is ye-er juty to ye-erself to show ye're a po-lis-man with a head on ye," insisted Mrs. Flynn.

"To prove I ha-ave a head on me 't is necessary fr to ha-ave it blowed off," commented Policeman Flynn, lugubriously.

"If ye ha-aven't th' injinoo-ity to save it, 'tis better so," asserted Mrs. Flynn. "Don't ye iver let thim sma-art day-tictives get th' cr-redit fr ye-er wor-rk, Barney Flynn, or I'll belave ye're not Irish at all, but only a Po-lack or some other furriner."

With this the subject was temporarily dropped; but Policeman Flynn knew that he had to do that particular job himself in order to have peace in the family, and Mrs. Flynn knew that he would do it and do it well. He did not report his discovery at the station, but devoted his spare time to further investigations. In this he was violating a rule of the department, but what is a rule of the department compared with a rule of the household? He wanted to learn the habits and methods of the gang and do the planning himself, well knowing this assumption of responsibility would be overlooked if he were successful. When everything was in readiness, he outlined his plan to his captain, and asked for aid in making the raid.

"Tis a despr't cr-rwd," he said, "an' maybe they'll thry to break awa-ay."

"You want two men at each entrance, you say?" queried the captain.

Policeman Flynn nodded. "And how many to go in?"

"Wan. T is a nice inj'yable bit iv spoor! I ha-ave picked out fr meself."

"You'll be killed," asserted the captain. "As I understand it, the stolen goods are left in the basement at odd times, and then the gang gathers there quietly some night, meets the 'fence,' and the business is cleaned up and the money paid. The only way to do is to overwhelm them."

"Not fr an injane-yus ma-an," answered Policeman Flynn, confidently. "Tis me pur-pose to dhrop in on thim, but 't is not me night fr dyin'. I'll tell ye why. Here he leaned over and whispered in the captain's ear.

The latter immediately began to laugh. Then he slapped Policeman Flynn on the back, and cried: "Go ahead, Barney. You can have all the men you want."

So it happened that when Policeman Flynn next appeared at his home his coat was split up the back, his trousers were torn, his collar was off, and he was covered with dirt and dust.

"I got thim," he announced, briefly. "Ye luk it," replied Mrs. Flynn, surveying him critically.

"I surpr-ised thim."

"If ye lukked like ye do now ye'd surpr-ise anny wan."

"T was this wa-ay," went on Policeman Flynn. "Th' gazabo that pinches th' goods takes thim to th' alley an' dhrops thim into a chute, so's he can ma-ake his getaway quick if they's any wan followin' him. Oho! but 'tis well arra-anged. Niver a wan iv thim that steals th' goods takes thim into th' place at all, an' they niver goes there only whin the time comes fr th' fence to shquare up with thim, an' thim they goes in th' front wa-ay. But 'tis me that found th' chute all hidden awa-ay nice where a windy used fr to be. So I puts two min at th' front door an' two min at th' slide door, an' thim I dhrops in on thim an' ma-akes thim think a bit iv th' judg-mint da-ay has come. Oho! it ma-akes me laugh to think iv it. They like to have died iv heart failure."

"How'd ye go in, Barney?" asked Mrs. Flynn.

"I wint down the chute like a hod iv brick, an' is-anded on th' table where they was sittin'. I had thim ma-archin' out before they knew what was doin'."

"Ha-ave ye thim all at th' station?" inquired Mrs. Flynn.

"All but wan," answered the patrolman.

"Did he get awa-ay?"

"M-m-m, well, ye may sa-ay he did—after a fashion; but 'tis me that knows where to find him."

"Where?"

"At th' hospittle," said Policeman Flynn. "He br-rke me fal as I come down th' chute, an' he got awa-ay in an amblyance."

THE VINES FOR HOT PLACES.

Some Veritable Salamanders Do Well on Western and Southern Exposure

The western and southern side of a building is a rather trying position for any kind of plant, especially a vine, but some there are which seem veritable salamanders in their ability to stand unscathed such a hot location.

Among these indoors and out recommends certain of the moon flowers, notably Ipomoea pandurata, which is said to be able to withstand a year's drought without injury. The foliage is attractive, and it bears an immense quantity of creamy white flowers of a thick, waxy texture. Once established it covers an immense amount of space and for this reason should be given liberal room when planting.

Another vine which thrives in hot, sunny situations is the Cobaea scandens. This, while not hardy, being started each spring from seed sown in house or hotbed, is so rapid a grower that it will cover quite as much space as a perennial vine. When grown on a stone wall or on trees the tendrils cling to anything within reach.

The blossoms are large and gloxinialike and change in color from the greenish white of the newly opened flower through shades of lavender, mauve and purple as the flowers develop, ending at last in the deepest wine red the flower fades.

When the period of bloom is over the flowers fall, so that there are never any withered ones on the vine.

When grown on porches or wood it should be provided with twine or wire netting for support. It should be well watered in hot, dry weather, but during damp weather should not receive any water. An occasional drink of liquid manure during the blooming period will be of benefit.

If desired its roots may be taken up in the fall and wintered over in the conservatory or greenhouse, where they will continue in bloom during the winter and may be planted out again during summer. The seeds of the cobaea are much addicted to decay and in planting they should be placed in the soil edgewise and kept only moderately moist.

WHAT TO TAKE TO A PICNIC.

And How to Pack, So Food Will Not Be Mussy.

Deviled eggs go well with cold meat when they have not been used in salad; plain hard boiled eggs are indifferent eating, and these will repay the little trouble it takes to prepare them. Cut in two, remove the yolk and mash it with salt and pepper and a little dry mustard; wet with a little vinegar, and replace, pressing the two halves together; roll each egg in paraffin paper.

If there are no olives in your salad, take a bottle of these, but pour off the brine and rinse them, putting them dry in the bottle and corking them. Pimientos, little mangoes, chowchow, and all the different relishes taste better than usual in the open air, but one or two kinds are enough to take.

The sandwiches for the picnic should be made of something not too dry, directs a contributor to the Chicago Tribune. Lettuce spread with French dressing or mayonnaise will come out perfectly moist and fresh. Boned sardines, wet with lemon juice, finely chopped cucumbers with French dressing, thin bread and butter, brown or white, spread with caviare, cream cheese mixed with whipped cream, chopped watercress and simple bread and butter spread with mayonnaise or tartare sauce are all delightfully appetizing. Sweet sandwiches always seem out of place at a picnic, but if you wish a few, make them with orange marmalade or raspberry jam, using only a little for fear they may become wet with the juice.

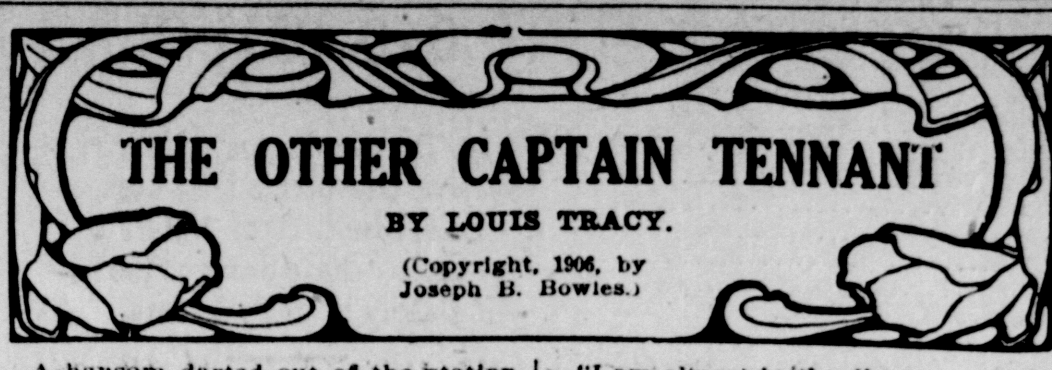

A freezer of ice cream always is a refreshing last course at a picnic, incongruous as it may seem. Peach surprise is something of a novelty, and it is a good thing in the year to offer it. Peel, cut up, and mash the peaches to a pulp, and sweeten them well. Then to a quart of these take the whites of five eggs, and turn them in without beating. Freeze solid, remove the dasher, pack the fruit down smoothly, and cover the freezer with ice and salt. There is no danger of the ice melting in the transportation.

Give Baby Freedom.

Baby, when placed upon his back upon a rug, will soon show mamma his own ideas about athletics. If his clothing is not too tight he will wave his little legs and arms in the air, and kick and sprawl in great delight. This is excellent for the muscles, and baby will show his appreciation of it by his evident pleasure in the little gymnastics he performs. For the first two or three years of baby's life a morning warm bath is given by many wise mothers. The child should be fed about half an hour before the bath. The temperature should be 95 degrees Fahrenheit in winter and about 90 degrees Fahrenheit in summer. Use a bath thermometer for estimating the temperature, since it is difficult otherwise to gauge it with accuracy.

Summer Wall Papers.

Summer wall papers are particularly fascinating this year. One is a mass of water lilies and leaves—no stems and no background, just a mass of yellow flowers and broad, green leaves. One of the coolest-looking of the summer papers has a deep "crown," showing white swans in blue water, in which tall, slender lilies are growing. The side walls below this two-foot crown are hung with a white paper almost covered with a network of reeds and iris leaves without the flowers.

BY LOUIS TRACY.

(Copyright, 1906, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

A hansom darted out of the station, and the occupants, two sun-tanned men, stamped with the cavalry seal, each clutching a window-rest and exchanged smiles of quick understanding.

"Great Scott!" cried the major, "it's good to be back in God's country after two and a half years in the Philippines! Look at the girls in muslin! Jimmy, let's charter the hansom for the afternoon and go round and see things!"

His excitement met with no response. Glancing at his companion, he suddenly checked the further outburst on his lips.

"What's up, Jimmy? No bad news, I hope?"

"Bad news! I have had none at all."

"Faith! there's plenty of good fish in the sea. Believe me, Jimmy, there is safety in numbers. I have run after women all my life and never caught one yet, so I have had all the sport and none of the worry."

Tennant agreed with him. He was in no mood for discussion, nor did his friend's cynical badinage appeal to him at the moment.

At last, when the major had gone off to a club Tennant stood irresolutely in the foyer of his hotel whilst pride and common sense wrestled for supremacy.

Pride said: "Why trouble your soul about a woman who has utterly ignored you for six long months, and now treats your homecoming with absolute indifference? Give her no further heed."

But common sense whispered: "Find out the truth before you decide. You would have trusted Elsie Stapleton with your life, your future, your honor. Do not now condemn her unheard."

He was a hard man and an obstinate one. Not readily, nor yet in stunted measure had he bestowed his love, and the causeless, merciless abandonment to which he had been subjected had seared his heart. Nevertheless, pride went under in the struggle, and he started forth to ascertain from the lady herself why he no longer found favor in her sight.

When he reached the lady's house, she was not there; indeed no one knew where she was. Her father had given up the house eight months ago, and in New York, where no man knows his next door neighbor, the interval opposed a blank wall against further inquiry. It struck him as a small coincidence that at the period of this change of residence he was in the wildest part of the Philippines and temporarily incapacitated from writing home. Letters from Elsie, breathing love and hope, continued to reach him by devious routes for some weeks. Then—silence!

Being a determined man, he interviewed local tradesmen, policemen, post office officials, and finally a doctor. Here he found a clue. Yes, exactly eight months ago, Miss Elsie Stapleton, suddenly became very ill—received a shock, he believed, by unexpected news concerning a friend in the Philippines, and was taken abroad by her father. The girl was dangerously ill.

Abaze with uncertainty, Tennant went back to his hotel. A man awaited his arrival, an army officer, like himself, and it was sufficiently amazing to read on the stranger's card: "Capt. J. W. Tennant."

"I have been chasing you round the world," he explained. "My business is important. Can we have a quiet talk somewhere?"

Jimmy led his namesake to a sitting-room. Here the other Capt. Tennant seated himself, lit a cigarette, and produced an envelope.

"Do you recognize the handwriting?" he said.

Jimmy required no second glance. It was Elsie's.

"How the deuce did this come into your possession?" he demanded, fiercely.

"Hold on! This affair may have caused you some trouble, but not half so much as it has given me. Now, just sit still and listen. My name happens to be John Watson Tennant. My wife, whom I recently married, and who was a millionaire's widow, happens to be extremely jealous. She collects my correspondence. I don't mind, as I thought all the letters would be from duns. I didn't count on receiving love-letters, and devilish well-written ones at that, from a young lady named Elsie. By Jove! didn't she make it hot for me? Never a word did she let on, though, for I should have discovered the mistake at once. To her there was only one J. W. Tennant in existence, and she did not believe me when I showed her your name in the army list. I must admit that the last letter appeared to justify her suspicions."

"The last letter!"

"Yes. I am awfully sorry for you, old man, but I couldn't help it. Miss Elsie evidently saw an account of my marriage in some papers and thought it was yours, as you had not written to her for some weeks. Then the fat was in the fire—with my wife, I mean. Since that document reached her she has made my life a misery, compelled me to leave the service, pays all the bills, never gives me a red cent, and alternately ties me to her apron string and threatens divorce proceedings."

"Give me . . . my letters!" gasped Jimmy.

The other man laughed discordantly.

"I am almost in the divorce court for demanding even an envelope," he cried. "My wife sleeps on them, and reads them twice a day whenever she thinks I am wheedling her a bit. Now, if you feel equal to it, come with me to my hotel and try all you know to persuade her that Elsie belongs to you, and not to me."

The persuasion took a form that the rich and elderly Mrs. Tennant was not accustomed to. It astounded and gratified her happy-go-lucky husband to see the way in which she quailed before Jimmy's wrath. The latter walked straight into her palatial suite and thrust some old and frayed letters before her eyes.

"You have some of my correspondence in your possession," he said, with an intensity of passion that cowed her instantly. "They are letters written to me by a Miss Elsie Stapleton. You will recognize her handwriting. Will you give them to me quietly, or must I take them by force?"

"John!" she shrieked, "protect me!"

"Darling," said her better half, "I am helpless. This is the other Capt. J. W. Tennant. You refused to believe me, ducky, when I assured you—"

"Do you hear, woman?" growled Jimmy. "Your miserable jealousy has entangled, perhaps wrecked, the happiness of two people who never imagined that such a creature as you could come between them. Give me my letters, or by the bones of your martyred first husband, I will—"

That was enough. She produced a crumpled packet from the bosom of her dress. Without a word of apology or further comment, Jimmy stood where he was and read the blurred lines, for the lady had wept hot tears over them, and the paper was almost in tatters. The silly mistake which might yet have a tragic ending was quickly revealed. Elsie had indeed seen in a newspaper an account of the marriage, and her lover's prolonged silence at that unhappy juncture forced her to the conclusion that he had flied her. Her last little note of farewell wrung his heart in agony.

It was a long and difficult search for ten days. Jimmy's chief difficulty was that the only persons who knew the Stapletons' whereabouts regarded him as an unprincipled scoundrel, and refused to see him. Then he found the girl's aunt, and the woman knew that this story was true. She told him that Elsie, who had been near to death, was slowly recovering her health in Florida.

He went there by the next steamer, and with him traveled Mr. and Mrs. Tennant—the latter most unwillingly, but named now into subjection to her lord and master. With a soldier's strategy the leader of mounted infantry first captured Elsie's father and made him listen to reason. Then it was thought advisable that the dame should be forced to go and tell her story to Elsie, and thus prepare her for the coming of her lover.

She played her part honestly, but with whimpers. She happened, too, to hear what Elsie said when Jimmy took her in his arms.

"Somehow," sobbed the girl, "I never really doubted you."

By succeeding mails from the Philippines came batches of Jimmy's correspondence, returned through the dead letter office, and Elsie enjoyed reading them, now that they were married, a great deal more than if he were still in the far east.

The two Tennants occasionally play bridge together at the same club, but the two Mrs. Tennants will never be real friends, though they meet at times.

WHEN STEAM WAS NEW POWER

First Boats Using It Were Considered Something Remarkable.

When the Lusitania took its first plunge into the waters of the Clyde it could have carried unseen on a corner of its deck the first steamship built in Britain. The Clyde claims both as its offspring, The Comet, constructed by Mr. Henry Bell, flashed its four shovel-shaped paddle on each of its four wheels in the year 1812, and carried on its deck of 40 feet by 10 as many passengers as its three horse-power could negotiate. The Comet was so conspicuously successful that two or three more boats of a larger capacity were immediately built, and the citizens of Glasgow became the envy of mankind. Mr. Lawrence, of Bristol, determined that England should not be left behind in the race, tried one on the Severn, and was so delighted with the result that he steamed with it up the Thames, intending to reap a harvest from city men on their way to and from business. He overlooked the company of Watermen, who made such a fuss about this inhuman competition that Mr. Lawrence and his steamship fell back to the Severn. From 1813 to 1823 no vessel was built in Britain of a greater tonnage than 500, the average being only about 60. The Lusitania of those days was the Atlas, described by the contemporary press as the "largest vessel ever built." She was impelled, says an enthusiastic reporter, by "three mighty engines of 100 horse-power each." This gigantic vessel (which could be stowed away quite comfortably in the hold of the Lusitania), was built at Rotterdam, and launched in the summer of 1828.

Money for Cattle, None for Babies.

These college professors may not be so very far ahead of future legislation. We spend through Washington now $7,000,000 a year in developing plant life, but not a dollar to discover a preventive of pneumonia. In ten years the department of agriculture has expended nearly $50,000,000 in developing products of the soil, but there is no bureau with money for the development of the more than 1,000,000 infants every year. It is true that Drs. Wiley, Atwater and Benedict have done wonderful work, but within a limited sphere, in the preservation of infant life. While they have worried for a little money to carry on experiments, a million has gone in stamping out cholera among swine. Prof. Norton estimates that during the next census period more than 6,000,000 of infants under two years of age must succumb, yet with proper knowledge of preventable diseases this number could be cut in two.

American Poetry.

American poetry is occasional, not professional; something aside from the day's work, instead of being the day's work.

Browning wrote a poem a day for a stated period, applying his every working hour to the task undertaken. Browning is an example of a professional poet. We cannot boast of such an example.

John Burroughs boasts of only one poem called "Waiting." Hawthorne and Webster wrote two or three poems. Cooper wrote three.

Bryant had a day's work to do in a newspaper office, as did Eugene Field, while Emerson had lectures to deliver. Sidney Lanier was a flute player in a Baltimore orchestra.

Joaquin Miller is writing poems while he plows—like Burns.

Billiards at Sea.

"Can you imagine playing billiards in a heavy gale?" said the captain. "Do you wonder that our new liners, with their elevators and telephones and gymnasiums, don't have billiard tables as well? One ship once had a billiard table—the Great Eastern."

"The wonderful Great Eastern had a billiard table on a swinging deck. This deck was supposed to counteract the ship's motion, and to keep the table steady. But it failed to do so, and very remarkable were some of the shots made on the Great Eastern's table in rough weather."

"Nevertheless, the table was kept for years, and was a popular institution aboard the big boat. But no other, boat before or since has ever bothered to introduce billiards."

Great Singer Offered Job.

One day Mme. Calve was being shown over a famous grotto, when suddenly she thought of Gluck's opera, and began singing the first act. The boy who acted as guide listened appreciatively. When she had finished he remarked: "If you went and asked the proprietor if you might sing here while people are being shown the place, I think he would pay you well." "How much do you think he would pay me?" asked Mme. Calve, without a smile. The boy gravely considered the question. "About five francs, perhaps, a day," he answered after a little pause, and the singer agreed with him that it was good pay.

"Denatured Women."

It is said that some of the club women of New York complain of the way in which the parks of that city are littered up by parties of children.

No doubt such complaints have been made, for there are flinkey women everywhere, but we doubt if the whole burden of the attempt to block the childish fun should be laid at the door of the club women, who are often the objects of unjust criticism.

We should rather suspect that the idea originated with those denatured women, whether members of clubs or not, who sport dogs instead of children.

NATIONAL FARMERS' UNION ADJOURNS AT TEXARKANA

Texarkana, Ark., Sept. 11.—The National Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, which has been in session here since last Wednesday, completed its labors and adjourned Saturday night.

Among the resolutions passed were the following:

To memorialize congress to give to the rural school districts of the South the cotton tax of $65,000,000 collected unjustly and illegally in 1861-65.

Urging members to purchase only union-made goods bearing the union label, and declaring in favor of a parcel post. This last was adopted unanimously amid much enthusiasm.

A resolution was also adopted inviting the farmers "engaged in cotton growing and grain growing to meet with the Farmers' Co-operative Business association at Topeka, Kan., Oct. 22, to devise ways and means of extending our trade relations that we may deal with each other more directly and in this way dispense with the gambler and speculator that is now operating between us."

A practically new constitution was adopted and will be submitted for approval of all the members of the union at a referendum vote to be taken between the hours of 1 o'clock and 12 o'clock p. m., Nov. 24.

By this new constitution the name of the organization is changed to the Farmers' National Union and the qualifications for membership are fixed. White persons and Indians of both sexes over 16 years of age are eligible to membership, but negroes will not be admitted. Merchants, lawyers and members of trusts and combines are barred.

Editors who will sign a pledge to sustain and support the cause of the union in the columns of their papers are eligible to become members.

The referendum is provided for and may be invoked on any measure at any time on petition of 5 per cent of the members of the organization.

Any state having within its territory a total membership of 5000 is entitled to a charter entitling it to organize a state union. The officers of the national union are to be president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and board of directors, and are to be elected annually.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows. President, C. S. Barret, Atwater, Ga.; vice president, J. E. Montgomery, Cleason, Tenn.; secretary-treasurer, R. H. McCullough, Bebee, Ark.

Board of directors: W. A. Morris, W. S. Miller, Texas; J. N. McAllester, Indiana; Campbell Russell, Oklahoma; James Butler, Kansas.

An order was made that the existing union in Oklahoma may not organize any new locals, but may continue to collect dues from such as have already been organized under its charter. Indian Territory, however, may continue to organize new locals.

A union press association was organized with Ben I. Griffin, of Arkansas, president, and Homer Higgs, of Tennessee, secretary.

The Jesse Rally.

Democratic spellbinders James Griggs and J. W. Bolen, accompanied by W. S. Kerr, and N. T. Hird, Dr. Truax and Col. Boland of Stonewall, went to Jesse Monday night to be in attendance at a Democratic rally. It had been reported that erstwhile citizen of Ada, W. J. Baugh had seduced some of the good citizens of that community into the Socialist fold, but the boys say that information was wrong and that Bro. Baugh occupies at Jesse about the same lonely pedestal that he did at Ada. Jesse's Democracy is on straight.

Warning Order.

All householders and owners of vacant lots in Ada are warned that they must comply with the ordinance and cut the weeds on their premises and the sidewalks and alleys adjacent thereto. I have imperative orders from the mayor, and unless the ordinance is complied with at once I positively will arrest all violators and bring them before the mayor's court.

PARENTS OF THE FOUNDLING ARE LOCATED AT ROFF

Through the account in the News of the finding of a baby in a thicket near Abe Crow's place some weeks ago, the parents have been located, arrested, confessed to the crime and now languish in the federal jail.

Something like five months ago Cora Foster of Roff, was married to Robt. Lane of the same place. On August 4 a child was born to the couple, which fact was kept quiet by the parties concerned. During this time Lane was in Oklahoma and had not seen the infant. The child was born at the home of Mrs. Foster, mother of the girl, at whose house the couple resided. Dreading the sting of disgrace and consequent village gossip attending the event, Mrs. Foster maintained a silence of the birth, and during the two weeks the child remained in her home became very much attached to it.

Lane came to Ada from Oklahoma on August 19. He hired a team and buggy of J. W. Thompson and drove to Roff. Arriving there late at night he secretly brought away his wife and baby, driving towards Ada. When near the Abe Crow place, the unnatural mother carefully tucked the little one in a blanket, handed the tiny bundle to Lane who deposited it in the clump of bushes where it was found fifteen hours later.

Lane and his wife then came to Ada, left the team at the stable and took a room at the Byrd hotel. The next day they returned to Roff. When questioned by Mrs. Foster, the girl's mother, as to the whereabouts of the infant, both were dumb as oysters and refused to say a word on the subject. Having shielded her daughter in her disgrace Mrs. Foster could not make the disappearance of the infant public, but when she saw the account in the News of how a baby was found, the description of its clothing and the coat mark on the garments, she knew that the little one was of her blood and Tuesday 'phoned the officers here of the facts and asked that the couple be apprehended.

Lane was a witness in the Foster-Smathers case and came to Ada Tuesday morning. He was met at the train by Office Deputy Brents and placed under arrest. When confronted with the garments worn by the little foundling, and the evidence, he confessed to the crime.

Deputy Cummings then boarded the train for Roff and placed Mrs. Lane under arrest. When informed that her husband had confessed she corroborated his statement.

Lane was formerly in the employ of D. B. Bradshaw, a merchant of Roff, whose coat mark was found on the garments worn by the baby found.

At 4 o'clock the preliminary hearing of the couple began before Judge Wixen. The youthful prisoners were terrified and when Mrs. Crow appeared with the baby in her arms Lane broke down and wept like a baby, while Mrs. Lane bore up more bravely.

The hearing is progressing as we go to press.

UNPRECEDENTED RAINFALL VISITS ADA TUESDAY NIGHT

With scarcely a drop of rain at Francis and the stars twinkling brightly all night at Mill Creek Ada people, Tuesday night, witnessed the heaviest fall of rain known to the oldest inhabitant. For nearly five hours the heavens wept copious tears, water came down in sheets and at times one could scarcely discern an arc light 100 feet distant. The lightning played incessantly and the peals of thunder sounded not unlike the report of two mighty opposing armies.

Much danger resulted in the city. Every bridge on the branch in the western section of Ada was swept away save one, on North Broadway, and the approaches to it are such that vehicles cannot cross.

The electric light plant was put out of commission shortly after midnight. Water filled the belt pits thus loosening the cement holdings on the belts.

At the Frisco depot the water at one time was level with the platform and debris was piled up against the freight house.

NOTES OF THE STORM.

Thousands of sparrows were drowned. The ground in many places was literally covered with their bodies. S. W. Hill gathered nearly a bushel basket of the dead birds.

Lightning struck the homes of Lem Mitchell, W. T. Cox, James Perry and B. F. Liebert, but slight damage was done at each place.

Something over six inches of water found its way into the Harris hotel kitchen and dining room. The patrons of the house assisted in the bailing.

The family of C. H. Fisk, living on West Fourteenth street, were removed from the house as the water rose to the floor. Mr. Fisk waded through the flood up to his waist band.

The building of the Crystal Ice Cream Co., was flooded to a depth of twenty inches.

Parties living in a small green house just west of the Ada machine shop, had a narrow escape. Water rose to tops of the beds and the women and children were rescued from these positions.

Sandy, this forenoon, lacked two feet of being up to high water mark, but was rising rapidly at that time. Two bridges, one just completed a few days ago, are gone.

The flood was ten inches deep in John McKoy's house.

ST. LOUIS PAYS HOMAGE TO THE GREAT COMMONER

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 12.—William J. Bryan received in St. Louis Tuesday the greatest of all the ovations which Missouri Democrats have tendered him in the last ten years.

Fifteen thousand persons packed the vast auditorium of the Coliseum at 8 o'clock and as many thousands clamored vainly outside for admission.

It was a sweltering, perspiring mass of humanity, but neither the jam nor the heat nor the manifold discomforts could lessen the ardor of their enthusiasm for the great commoner, returned once more to his own estate.

When Mr. Bryan appeared the great audience broke forth into cheers that even his magnetic hand was powerless to still. For full fifteen minutes the tumult continued. 15,000 throats, 30,000 hands and 10,000 flags affording such demonstration as the great Nebraskan has seldom received. National committeeman William A. Rothwell essayed in vain to make an introductory address. The cries of "Bryan! Bryan!" drowned his voice, and finally he was compelled to desist and allow Bryan to take the stage.

If there had been doubt as to Bryan's popularity in St. Louis it must have been dispelled today, for from the time he arrived at the Union Station at 7:30 until the time he retired to-night's appearance in St. Louis was one prolonged ovation. Mr. Bryan was followed by a cheering, howling crowd, which formed an informal procession and cheered him as he passed through the most strenuous day he has spent since his return to America.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Indian Arbitrator Speaks of Weaver.

It is with great pleasure that we announce the fact that Carlton Weaver, of the Ada Daily and Weekly News, is a candidate for the office of delegate to the constitutional convention from the Eighty-seventh district, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

The subject of this sketch was born at Mt. Vernon, Texas, 25 years ago. He worked on his father's farm until he was 17 years of age, when he moved to the Territory, first locating at Pauls Valley, where he divided his time equally between school and farm work. In the spring of 1900 he moved to Ada, then an Indian village, and for a year was in the employ of Reed & Fuller, general merchandise. During the following year, 1901, he did any kind of labor he could find to do, anything, in fact, that would assist him in keeping soul and body together, and it was in the fall of this year that the writer, who was then doing time on the Ada Star to the tune of $6 a week, had the pleasure of forming Mr. Weaver's acquaintance. At this particular time he was engaged at a time kill out west of town, but, after much persuasion and a fair line of "hair castle" construction, induced him to lay aside his overalls and hickory shirt, don a pair of speckled trousers and a hard boiled hat and engage with us in the new paper business, which he did. The plant of the Ada Weekly News, which had recently been moved here to the Center, was purchased from the proprietor, A. E. Baker, of Pauls Valley, and it was during our connection with him in this enterprise that we learned of his harmoniously blended character, temperate habits and high moral principles.

About 18 months had passed, he assumed sole control of the News, and under his management the enterprise grew and prospered. In September, 1904, his brother, Otis Weaver, assumed management of the paper, and Carlton satisfied a long cherished ambition to resume and finish his school work. He went to Indianapolis, Indiana, and matriculated in the university of that city. He had paid his fees and been properly enrolled, when a negro was admitted to the institution, and, of course, Weaver balked. He proclaimed his indignation from the house tops, denounced the school and its faculty, and caught the first train for Dixie, landing at the Kentucky University, where he entered and accomplished a most successful year's work, being unanimously selected as president of his class.

The following year he did not return to the state of his father's nativity, but entered the university of the new state in which he has cast his lot, at Norman, Oklahoma. At this place he was also awarded signal honor, being chosen president of his class of sixty-eight members during his first year. He was one of the two victorious debaters chosen from the university to represent Oklahoma in the inter-collegiate debate against Kansas last May. Oklahoma secured the unanimous decision.

During his university career he gave special attention to political science, economics and argumentation, and was the unanimous choice for the presidency of the well known Oklahoma State University Democratic club. As far as his Democracy is concerned, it cannot be questioned in the least, and at the present time he is serving as secretary of the Ada precinct Democratic club.

Mr. Weaver's declaration of principles, which appear in this issue, are open for inspection, and will stand the test of the most critical politician. He touches all the important issues in which most of the people are interested, and all have the clean, clear-cut ring. The story of his experience at Indianapolis, as related above, is sufficient evidence that he stands for a white man's government and would fight to the last ditch for separate schools, separate coaches and separate waiting rooms—three things that the Democracy of this country absolutely demand.

Mr. Weaver makes this race in response to a petition signed by a hundred or more staunch citizens of this city as well as the personal solicitation of a host of friends. His character needs no additional comment, for it is an open book. His life has been a ceaseless protest against the dominant tendencies of our contemporary era—the narrowing greed of gold, the relentless materialism, the decadence of courtesy in high places and the all prevailing secular and commercial standard. In regard to these cardinal points of a Christian civilization we believe that Mr. Weaver is able to comprehend the top-notch ideal of the voters of this district, and if selected as the Democratic nominee, the path of those who oppose him will be strewn with anything but roses.

BOGUS OR REAL REFORMERS?

There has been a good deal of controversy as to whether the present Administration leaders are bogus, or real reformers. The suspicion that Mr. Roosevelt has been playing reformer, while doing nothing to really control the trusts and corporations, rests on evidence that is quite strong enough to cause a grand jury to bring in a true bill. Reformers, like other people, must be judged by what they do, rather than by what they say or write.

Up to the present time the reforms attempted by Mr. Roosevelt are all "up in the air," they may materialize in the future, if he sticks to them manfully and does not back down when confronted with obstacles, as he has done in the tariff revision reform. He starts new political reforms constantly, but when the old party bosses show him that to carry these reforms out would split or disintegrate the G. O. P., Mr. Roosevelt gets discouraged and backs water.

But as a reformer of other than republican politics, Mr. Roosevelt is more stable, he has just ordered the reduction of spending reform in his department of the government and as there will be no reason for the Republican politicians to object to that reform, for most of them are quite likely to spell in this phonetic way as by the rules of the Dictionary, they will be glad to see Mr. Roosevelt amuse himself in that way instead of other reforms that are more dangerous to the party.

It is strange a sentence of the President's Message to Congress this fall may contain this: The brazen standpatters are common and harsh and should be suppressed for their wilful and for the frenzied fantasy of protection. I recommend that every dash schedule be stripped of its woful and lachrymal injustice. If this accurate tariff is not discussed and let off at this session, the dash Democrats will have you whipt to a frazzle in the next Congress.

Now that is something like reform.

Bond Election.

[Notice of Special Election.]

Notice is hereby given that a Special Election by the voters of the City of Ada, Indian Territory, who are qualified electors owning real or personal property subject to taxation in the said City of Ada, Indian Territory, has been called by the mayor and city council of Ada, Indian Territory, and will be held at the mayor's office in Ward No. 1, and at John Beard's building on Broadway in Ward No. 2, and at the United States commissioner's office in Ward No. 3, and at the John Barringer building on Townsend avenue between Main and Twelfth street in Ward No. 4, of the City of Ada, Indian Territory, on the 8th day of October, A. D. 1906, between the hours of 8 o'clock a. m. and sunset of same day, as follows:

To vote on the proposition of issuing Forty Thousand Dollars in bonds of said City of Ada, Indian Territory; the terms and conditions of the bond issue is more particularly described and set forth in the resolution of the city council of the City of Ada, Indian Territory, passed on the 3rd day of September, A. D. 1906, and herewith published at length as a part of this notice:

J. P. Wood, Mayor.
JESSE WARREN, Recorder.

Mr. OLIVER's prophecy that Ada people would yet be brought to their knees, was partially verified Tuesday night when people in the lower sections of the town spent some hours on their knees calling the cracks at the bottom of the doors.

If it rained forty days and forty nights during Noah's time, the people would not have been safe sitting on the moon had Jupiter Pluvius kept up his Hicks half the time as he did Tuesday night.

THE Ada city marshal should make a vigorous war on the tramp canines of this town, and this should be kept up until not one of the ravenous hyenas is left. They are of no more advantage to the city than rats and should be destroyed for the very same reason that rats are destroyed. It has become so that one is almost afraid to step out of the house after dark. The dog catcher should get busy.

ODD POINT IN AUTO CASE.

Relatives of Victim Hold Motorist Who Raised Dust Partly to Blame for Accident.

Paris.—A curious point in an action against a motor car driver came before the judges of the French chamber. It was a question as to whether a chauffeur who had raised dust could be proceeded against for homicide for carelessness.

On May 1 last an automobile passed a cyclist on the road between Melun and Paris. The car raised a cloud of dust, with the result that the cyclist could not see his way. His machine swerved, and he was overtaken by another motor car, which knocked him down and killed him.

Could the driver of the first car, which had raised a cloud of dust, be held responsible for the accident caused by the second car? The case came before the Corbell court, which imposed a fine of $200 on the driver of the second car, besides compelling him to pay $800 compensation. But the driver of the car which caused the dust to fly was acquitted, and his claim for $40 for being unjustifiably prosecuted was allowed against the family of the cyclist who was killed. This decision was appealed against.

BODY GIVEN TO COLLEGE.

Aged Convict's Request Carried Out by Prison Authorities at Michigan City, Ind.

Michigan City, Ind.—The body of the dead life convict, James Blackwood, who was the oldest inmate of the state prison, was taken to the Valparaiso college for dissection by the medical department.

Blackwood died in the prison hospital after serving 18 years behind the prison bars. He had been here since the transfer from Jeffersonville in 1887.

As Blackwood was dying there stood beside his cot James L. Myers, the murderer who was given a pardon by Gov. Hanly. Myers was found praying for the dying convict when the glad tidings of the pardon came to his ears.

Blackwood served 18 years for a murder in Clay county in 1887. All that remains of his family is a son residing in Texas. The son was notified after death, but made no reply.

The crime for which James Blackwood was sentenced occurred while a party was returning from a dance in Benwood, Clay county, to Cardonia. Blackwood quarreled with his wife. In the fight which followed the woman was knocked down and sustained four broken ribs. She was wrapped in a bundle of straw and left by the roadside, where she was found in the morning. She died soon after. Blackwood pleaded guilty and was sentenced by the late Judge Coffey, of Brazil.

RIGHT TO THE LETTER.

American Purchaser of Silver in London Is Served with Accuracy.

A New Yorker was once referring to the stolidity and literal-mindedness of the British shopkeeper, when he was reminded of an amusing experience of a friend in London, relates Success Magazine.

The American had been making several purchases in a jewelry establishment, among others a silver set, and finding that he had with him insufficient funds to defray the entire cost, he desired the clerk to send the set to his hotel, marked "C. O. D."

Due note was made by the clerk; but when the articles arrived at the hotel the purchaser was surprised to find that no charges had been collected. Opening the package the American was dumfounded to discover that each piece of silver had been carefully engraved, in a beautiful monogram, "C. O. D."

The Ten Virgins.

Evangelist Trimble spoke on the parable of the Ten Virgins at the Christian church Tuesday night. He made it plain to his hearers that the parable applies directly to church members. He said in substance:

"This scripture does not say that the kingdom of Heaven shall be like the five wise virgins, and the outside world like the five foolish. The kingdom, the church, is likened unto the five foolish as much as unto the five wise virgins. The foolish virgins at one time were ready for the coming of the bridegroom, but did not continue in a state of preparation. They sought oil, not because their lamps had never been lighted, but because they had gone out. This parable is given to teach us that we may be ready at one time in our lives, and wholly without preparation when death comes.

"While this parable applies directly to church members, I want to say a few words to those who have never been ready. 'You are all going forth. The meeting is inevitable. You all expect to enjoy the great feast that God has prepared for you. The greatest tragedy ever enacted in the human heart, will be enacted when one who said as a boy, Heaven shall be my home, and said it again as a young man, and as an old man there was still a ray of hope but when he comes before the Judge to hear that awful sentence, every ray of hope will be swept away. That that made an unfortunate rich man more uncomfortable than anything else was the memory of unimproved opportunities. He called for one to be sent from the lead to tell his brethren just what he would have told them. When the Lord calls upon us to remember, may there be no memories of evil deeds, of unimproved opportunities to disturb us for an eternity."

Will Play in Own Back Yard.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 12.—The Oklahoma and Indian Territory Republican executive committee held a conference Tuesday for the purpose of amalgamating the two committees. The Oklahoma committee appointed a committee of three to wait on Indian Territory to consider the amalgamation. The Indian Territory committee agreed to amalgamation if given the chairmanship. This was refused, and it was decided to postpone any further action along this line until after the constitutional convention.

Charles Filson, on account of being territorial secretary, resigned the chairmanship of the Oklahoma committee and was succeeded by Jake Hamon, of Lawton. About one hundred distinguished politicians are attracted here as a result of the conference.

The speaker of the occasion was Hon. Tom D. McKeown, of Ada, who spoke interestingly and at length on organization and of the principles that should be incorporated in the constitution. W. S. Kerr and Cathon Weaver, of Ada, were also present, and each made a few fitting remarks. The club will meet every two weeks.

Letter to Mr. J. R. Young, Ada, I. T.

Dear Sir: The cheapest thing in the way of sending any message over the world is a postage stamp, and the cheapest way to shed water is pain.

Not white wash, but Do you happen to know it don't belong to your business to know a pain, you know—do you happen to know that most of the pains of pain stuff it out with the index and sand and water and air?

Doesn't it hurt in the can, but not in the house. They make more money to sell you a pain; more money to sell you a pain; more money to pay for a pain; more money to put it on, but no more beauty, more rust, decay, disappointment, loss.

Devote is your point, because it's all paint, no sham and full-measure. Yours truly

THE HISTORY OF POLICEMAN FLYNN

HE RAIDS A "FENCE."
(Copyright, by The Century Co.)
(Copyright, 1904, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Great was the day that Policeman Barney Flynn raided a "fence." But, of course, he never would have done it if he had not been properly prompted by his wife. Like many another man, Policeman Flynn does not go out hunting for trouble and work, and it takes a certain amount of feminine sarcasm and criticism to make him even reasonably ambitious. But once roused to action, there is no man on "th' force" who can surpass him in either resourcefulness or nerve.

"Oho! I've found a fence," he announced joyously to his wife one night. "What'll ye do with it?" demanded Mrs. Flynn.

"What'll I do with it?" repeated Policeman Flynn. "What d' ye sup-pose? Is it ye-or idee that I'll give it ye fr to get r-round ye-or ga-ar-den? 'T is a shuang conception ye ha-ave iv me official juties an' th' worries iv me daily toll. I pray-sume ye think 't is a shone fence with flagree wor-ork on th' ir'a gate, but ye're wr-wrong. This fence is a pla-ace where sholen goods is aego-shated fr ha-ard cash."

"Did ye l'ave thim at th' station?" asked Mrs. Flynn.

"L'ave what?" inquired Policeman Flynn. "Th' goods?"

"No; th' min. They's min that r-runs th' fence, iv coorse. Did ye get thim?"

"Ye'd like fr to be a widdy, w'd ye?" retorted Policeman Flynn, somewhat warmly. Policeman Flynn winced, but he too well knew the danger and difficulties of such a raid to be readily brought to his wife's view of the matter.

"'T w'd be like takin' wan's own life fr to go in there alone," he protested.

"Surpr-rise thim," advised Mrs. Flynn. With this the subject was temporarily dropped; but Policeman Flynn knew that he had to do that particular job himself in order to have peace in the family, and Mrs. Flynn knew that he would do it and do it well. He did not report his discovery at the station, but devoted his spare time to further

THE VINES FOR HOT PLACES.

Some Veritable Salamanders Do Well on Western and Southern Exposure

The western and southern sides of a building is a rather trying position for any kind of plant, especially a vine, but some there are which seem workable salamanders in their ability to stand unscathed such a hot location.

Among these indoors and out recom-mends certain of the moon flowers, notably Ipomoea pandurata, which is said to be able to withstand a year's drought without injury. The foliage is attractive, and it bears an immense quantity of creamy white flowers of a thick, waxy texture. Once established it covers an immense amount of space and for this reason should be given liberal room when planting.

Another vine which thrives in hot, sunny situations is the Cobaea scandens. This, while not hardy, being started each spring from seed sown in house or hotbed, is so rapid a grower that it will cover quite as much space as a perennial vine. When grown on a stonewall or on trees the tendrils cling to anything within reach.

The blossoms are large and gloxinia-like and change in color from the greenish white of the newly opened flower through shades of lavender, mauve and purple as the flowers develop, ending at last in the deepest wine ere the flower fades.

When the period of bloom is over the flowers fall, so that there are never any withered ones on the vine. When grown on porches or wood it should be provided with twine or wire netting for support. It should be well watered in hot, dry weather, but during damp weather should not receive any water. An occasional drink of liquid manure during the blooming period will be of benefit.

If desired its roots may be taken up in the fall and wintered over in the conservatory or greenhouse, where they will continue to bloom during the winter and may be planted out again during summer. The seeds of the cobaea are much addicted to decay and in planting they should be placed in the soil edgewise and kept only moderately moist.

WHAT TO TAKE TO A PICNIC.

And How to Pack, So Food Will Not Be Mussy.

Deviled eggs go well with cold meat when they have not been used in salad; plain hard boiled eggs are in different eating, and these will repay the little trouble it takes to prepare them. Cut in two, remove the yolk and mash it with salt and pepper and a little dry mustard; wet with a little vinegar, and replace, pressing the two halves together; roll each egg in paraffin paper.

If there are no olives in your salad, take a bottle of these, but pour off the brine and rinse them, putting them dry in the bottle and corking them. Pimientos, little mangoes, chowchow, and all the different relishes taste better than usual in the open air, but one or two kinds are enough to take.

The sandwiches for the picnic should be made of something not too dry, directs a contributor to the Chicago Tribune. Lettuce spread with French dressing or mayonnaise will come out perfectly moist and fresh. Boned sardines, wet with lemon juice, finely chopped cucumbers with French dressing, thin bread and butter, brown or white, spread with caviare, cream cheese mixed with whipped cream, chopped watercress and simple bread and butter spread with mayonnaise or tartare sauce are all delightfully appetizing. Sweet sandwiches always seem out of place at a picnic, but if you wish a few, make them with orange marmalade or raspberry jam, using only a little for fear they may become wet with the juice.

A freezer of ice cream always is a refreshing last course at a picnic, incongruous as it may seem. Peach surprise is something of a novelty, and it is a good time in the year to offer it. Peel, cut up, and mash the peaches to a pulp, and sweeten them well. Then to a quart of these take the whites of five eggs, and turn them in without beating. Freeze solid, remove the dasher, pack the fruit down smoothly, and cover the freezer with ice and salt. There is no danger of the ice melting in the transportation.

Give Baby Freedom.

Baby, when placed upon his back upon a rug, will soon show mamma his own ideas about athletics. If his clothing is not too tight he will wave his little legs and arms in the air, and kick and sprawl in great delight. This is excellent for the muscles, and baby will show his appreciation of it by his evident pleasure in the little gymnastics he performs. For the first two or three years of baby's life a morning warm bath is given by many wise mothers. The child should be fed about half an hour before the bath. The temperature should be 95 degrees Fahrenheit in winter and about 90 degrees Fahrenheit in summer. Use a bath thermometer for estimating the temperature, since it is difficult otherwise to gauge it with accuracy.

Summer Wall Papers.

Summer wall papers are particularly fascinating this year. One is a mass of water lilies and leaves—no stems and no background, just a mass of yellow flowers and broad, green leaves. One of the coolest-looking of the summer papers has a deep "crown," showing white swans in blue water, in which tall, slender lilies are growing. The side walls below this two-foot crown are hung with a white paper almost covered with a network of reeds and iris leaves without the flowers.

THE OTHER CAPTAIN TENNANT

BY LOUIS TRACY.
(Copyright, 1904, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

A hansom darted out of the station, and the occupants, two sun-tanned men, stamped with the cavalry seal, each clutched a window-seat and exchanged smiles of quick understanding.

"Great Scott!" cried the major, "it's good to be back in God's country after two and a half years in the Philippines! Look at the girls in muftin! Jimmy, let's charter the hansom for the afternoon and go round and see things!"

His excitement met with no response. Glancing at his companion, he suddenly checked the further outburst on his lips.

"What's up, Jimmy? No bad news, I hope?"

"Bad news! I have had none at all."

"Faith! there's plenty of good fish in the sea. Believe me, Jimmy, there is safety in numbers. I have run after women all my life and never caught one yet, so I have had all the sport and none of the worry."

Tennant agreed with him. He was in no mood for discussion, nor did his friend's cynical badinage appeal to him at the moment.

At last, when the major had gone off to a club Tennant stood irresolutely in the foyer of his hotel, whilst pride and common sense wrestled for supremacy.

Pride said: "Why trouble your soul about a woman who has utterly ignored you for six long months, and now treats your homecoming with absolute indifference? Give her no further heed."

But common sense whispered: "Find out the truth before you decide. You would have trusted Elsie Stapleton with your life, your future, your honor. Do not now condemn her unheard."

He was a hard man and an obstinate one. Not readily, nor yet in stunted measure had he bestowed his love, and the causeless, merciless abandonment to which he had been subjected had seared his heart. Nevertheless, pride under in the struggle, and he started forth to ascertain from the lady herself why he no longer found favor in her sight.

When he reached the lady's house, she was not there; indeed no one knew where she was. Her father had given up the house eight months ago, and in New York, where no man knows his next door neighbor, the interval opposed a blank wall against further inquiry. It struck him as a small coincidence that at the period of this change of residence he was in the wildest part of the Philippines and temporarily incapacitated from writing home. Letters from Elsie, breathing love and hope, continued to reach him by devious routes for some weeks. Then—silence!

Being a determined man, he interviewed local tradesmen, policemen, post office officials, and finally a doctor. Here he found a clue. Yes, exactly eight months ago, Miss Elsie Stapleton, suddenly became very ill—received a shock, he believed, by unexpected news concerning a friend in the Philippines, and was taken abroad by her father. The girl was dangerously ill.

Abashed with uncertainty, Tennant went back to his hotel. A man awaited his arrival, an army officer, like himself, and it was sufficiently amazing to read on the stranger's card: "Capt. J. W. Tennant."

"I have been chasing you round the world," he explained. "My business is important. Can we have a quiet talk somewhere?"

Jimmy led his namesake to a sitting-room. Here the other Capt. Tennant seated himself, lit a cigarette, and produced an envelope.

"Do you recognize the handwriting?" he said.

Jimmy required no second glance. It was Elsie's.

"How the deuce did this come into your possession?" he demanded, fiercely.

"Hold on! This affair may have caused you some trouble, but not half so much as it has given me. Now, just sit still and listen. My name happens to be John Watson Tennant. My wife, whom I recently married, and who was a millionaire's widow, happens to be extremely jealous. She collects my correspondence. I don't mind, as I thought all the letters would be from duns. I didn't count on receiving love-letters, and devilish well-written ones at that, from a young lady named Elsie. By Jove! didn't she make it hot for me? Never a word did she let on, though, for I should have discovered the mistake at once. To her there was only one J. W. Tennant in existence, and she did not believe me when I showed her your name in the army list. I must admit that the last letter appeared to justify her suspicions."

"The last letter?"

"Yes. I am awfully sorry for you, old man, but I couldn't help it. Miss Elsie evidently saw an account of my marriage in some papers and thought it was yours, as you had not written to her for some weeks. Then the fat was in the fire—with my wife, I mean. Since that document reached her she has made my life a misery, compelled me to leave the service, pays all the bills, never gives me a red cent, and alternately ties me to her apron string and threatens divorce proceedings."

"Give me . . . my letters!" gasped Jimmy.

The other man laughed discordantly.

"I am almost in the divorce court for demanding even an envelope," he cried. "My wife sleeps on them, and reads them twice a day whenever she thinks I am wheedling her a bit. Now, if you feel equal to it, come with me to my hotel and try all you know to persuade her that Elsie belongs to you, and not to me."

The persuasion took a form that the rich and elderly Mrs. Tennant was not accustomed to. It astounded and gratified her happy-go-lucky husband to see the way in which she qualified before Jimmy's wrath. The latter walked straight into her, palatial suite and thrust some old and frayed letters before her eyes.

"You have some of my correspondence in your possession," he said, with an intensity of passion that cowed her instantly. "They are letters written to me by a Miss Elsie Stapleton. You will recognize her handwriting. Will you give them to me quietly, or must I take them by force?"

"John!" she shrieked, "protect me!"

"Darling," said her better half, "I am helpless. This is the other Capt. J. W. Tennant. You refused to believe me, ducky, when I assured you—"

"Do you hear, woman?" growled Jimmy. "Your miserable jealousy has entangled, perhaps wrecked, the happiness of two people who never imagined that such a creature as you could come between them. Give me my letters, or by the bones of your martyred first husband, I will—"

That was enough. She produced a crumpled packet from the bosom of her dress. Without a word of apology or further comment, Jimmy stood where he was and read the blurred lines, for the lady had wept hot tears over them, and the paper was almost in tatters. The silly mistake which might yet have a tragic ending was quickly revealed. Elsie had indeed seen in a newspaper an account of the marriage, and her lover's prolonged silence at that unhappy juncture forced her to the conclusion that he had flitted her. Her last little note of farewell wrung his heart in agony.

It was a long and difficult search for ten days. Jimmy's chief difficulty was that the only persons who knew the Stapletons' whereabouts regarded him as an unprincipled scoundrel, and refused to see him. Then he found the girl's aunt, and the woman knew that this story was true. She told him that Elsie, who had been near to death, was slowly recovering her health in Florida.

He went there by the next steamer, and with him traveled Mr. and Mrs. Tennant—the latter most unwillingly, but shamed now into submission to her lord and master. With a soldier's strategy the leader of mounted infantry first captured Elsie's father and made him listen to reason. Then it was thought advisable that the dame should be forced to go and sell her story to Elsie, and thus prepare her for the coming of her lover.

She played her part honestly, but with whimpers. She happened, too, to hear what Elsie said when Jimmy took her in his arms.

"Somehow," sobbed the girl, "I never really doubted you. I read a description of this woman—and saw her photograph—and then I thought that fever or hardship had affected your brain."

By succeeding mails from the Philippines came batches of Jimmy's correspondence, returned through the dead letter office, and Elsie enjoyed reading them, now that they were married, a great deal more than if he were still in the far east.

The two Tennants occasionally play bridge together at the same club, but the two Mrs. Tennants will never be real friends, though they meet at times.

WHEN STEAM WAS NEW POWER

First Boats Using It Were Considered Something Remarkable.

When the Lusitania took its first plunge into the waters of the Clyde it could have carried unseen on a corner of its deck the first steamship built in Britain. The Clyde claims both as its offspring. The Comet, constructed by Mr. Henry Bell, flashed its four shovel-shaped paddle on each of its four wheels in the year 1812, and carried on its deck of 40 feet by 10 as many passengers as its three horse-power could negotiate. The Comet was so conspicuously successful that two or three more boats of a larger capacity were immediately built, and the citizens of Glasgow became the envy of mankind. Mr. Lawrence, of Bristol, determined that England should not be left behind in the race, tried one on the Severn, and was so delighted with the result that he steamed with it up the Thames, intending to reap a harvest from city men on their way to and from business. He overlooked the company of Watermen, who made such a fuss about this inhuman competition that Mr. Lawrence and his steamship fell back to the Severn. From 1812 to 1823 no vessel was built in Britain of a greater tonnage than 500, the average being only about 60. The Lusitania of those days was the Atlas, described by the contemporary press as the "largest vessel ever built." She was impelled, says an enthusiastic reporter, by "three mighty engines of 100 horse-power each." This gigantic vessel (which could be stowed away quite comfortably in the hold of the Lusitania), was built at Rotterdam, and launched in the summer of 1823.

Money for Cattle, None for Babies.

These college professors may not be so very far ahead of future legislation. We spend through Washington now $7,000,000 a year in developing plant life, but not a dollar to discover a preventative of pneumonia. In ten years the department of agriculture has expended nearly $50,000,000 in developing products of the soil, but there is no bureau with money for the development of the more than 1,000,000 infants every year. It is true that Drs. Wiley, Atwater and Benedict have done wonderful work, but within a limited sphere, in the preservation of infant life. While they have worried for a little money to carry on experiments, a million has gone in stamping out cholera among swine. Prof. Norton estimates that during the next census period more than 6,000,000 of infants under two years of age must succumb, yet with proper knowledge of preventable diseases this number could be cut in two.

American Poetry.

American poetry is occasional, not professional; something aside from the day's work, instead of being the day's work.

Browning wrote a poem a day for a stated period, applying his every working hour to the task undertaken. Browning is an example of a professional poet. We cannot boast of such an example.

John Burroughs boasts of only one poem called "Waiting." Hawthorne and Webster wrote two or three poems. Cooper wrote three.

Bryant had a day's work to do in a newspaper office, as did Eugene Field, while Emerson had lectures to deliver. Sidney Lanier was a flute player in a Baltimore orchestra.

Joaquin Miller is writing poems while he plows—like Burns.

Billiards at Sea.

"Can you imagine playing billiards in a heavy gale?" said the captain. "Do you wonder that our new liners, with their elevators and telephones and gymnasiums, don't have billiard tables as well? One ship once had a billiard table—the Great Eastern."

"The wonderful Great Eastern had a billiard table on a swinging deck. This deck was supposed to counteract the ship's motion, and to keep the table steady. But it failed to do so, and very remarkable were some of the shots made on the Great Eastern's table in rough weather."

"Nevertheless, the table was kept for years, and was a popular institution aboard the big boat. But no other boat before or since has ever bothered to introduce billiards."

Great Singer Offered Job.

One day Mme. Calve was being shown over a famous grotto, when suddenly she thought of Gluck's opera, and began singing the first act. The boy who acted as guide listened appreciatively. When she had finished he remarked: "If you went and asked the proprietor if you might sing here while people are being shown the place, I think he would pay you well." "How much do you think he would pay me?" asked Mme. Calve, without a smile. The boy gravely considered the question. "About five francs, perhaps, a day," he answered after a little pause, and the singer agreed with him that it was good pay.

Denatured Women.

It is said that some of the club women of New York complain of the way in which the parks of that city are littered up by parties of children. No doubt such complaints have been made; for there are finicky women everywhere, but we doubt if the whole burden of the attempt to block the childish fun should be laid at the door of the club women, who are often the objects of unjust criticism. We should rather suspect that the idea originated with those denatured women, whether members of clubs or not, who sport dogs instead of children.

NATIONAL FARMERS' UNION ADJOURNS AT TEXARKANA

Texarkana, Ark., Sept. 11.—The National Farmers' Educational and Co-operative Union, which has been in session here since last Wednesday, completed its labors and adjourned Saturday night.

Among the resolutions passed were the following:

To memorialize congress to give to the rural school districts of the South the cotton tax of $65,000,000 collected unjustly and illegally in 1861-65.

Urging members to purchase only union-made goods bearing the union label, and declaring in favor of a parcel post. This last was adopted unanimously amid much enthusiasm.

A resolution was also adopted inviting the farmers "engaged in cotton growing and grain growing to meet with the Farmers' Co-operative Business association at Topeka, Kan., Oct. 22, to devise ways and means of extending our trade relations that we may deal with each other more directly and in this way dispense with the gambler and speculator that is now operating between us."

A practically new constitution was adopted and will be submitted for approval of all the members of the union at a referendum vote to be taken between the hours of 1 o'clock and 12 o'clock p. m., Nov. 24.

By this new constitution the name of the organization is changed to the Farmers' National Union and the qualifications for membership are fixed. White persons and Indians of both sexes over 16 years of age are eligible to membership, but negroes will not be admitted. Merchants, lawyers and members of trusts and combines are barred.

Editors who will sign a pledge to sustain and support the cause of the union in the columns of their papers are eligible to become members.

The referendum is provided for and may be invoked on any measure at any time on petition of 5 per cent of the members of the organization.

Any state having within its territory a total membership of 5000 is entitled to a charter entitling it to organize a state union. The officers of the national union are to be president, vice president, secretary, treasurer and board of directors, and are to be elected annually.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are as follows. President, C. S. Barret, Atwater, Ga.; vice president, J. E. Montgomery, Cleeson, Tenn.; secretary-treasurer, R. H. McCullough, Bebee, Ark.

Board of directors. W. A. Morris, W. S. Miller, Texas; J. N. McAllester, Indiana; Campbell Russell, Oklahoma; James Butler, Kansas.

An order was made that the existing union in Oklahoma may not organize any new locals, but may continue to collect dues from such as have already been organized under its charter. Indian Territory, however, may continue to organize new locals.

A union press association was organized with Ben I. Griffin, of Arkansas, president, and Homer Higgs, of Tennessee, secretary.

The Jesse Rally.

Democratic spellbinders James Grigsby and J. W. Bolen, accompanied by W. S. Kerr, and N. T. Hird, Dr. Truax and Col. Boland of Stonewall, went to Jesse Monday night to be in attendance at a Democratic rally. It had been reported that erstwhile citizen of Ada, W. J. Baugh had seduced some of the good citizens of that community into the Socialist fold, but the boys say that information was wrong and that Bro. Baugh occupies at Jesse about the same lonely pedestal that he did at Ada. Jesse's Democracy is on straight.

Warning Order.

All householders and owners of vacant lots in Ada are warned that they must comply with the ordinance and cut the weeds on their premises and the sidewalks and alleys adjacent thereto. I have imperative orders from the mayor, and unless the ordinance is complied with at once I positively will arrest all violators and bring them before the mayor's court.

PARENTS OF THE FOUNDLING ARE LOCATED AT ROFF

Through the account in the News of the finding of a baby in a thicket near Abe Crow's place some weeks ago, the parents have been located, arrested, confessed to the crime and now languish in the federal jail.

Something like five months ago Cora Foster of Roff, was married to Robt. Lane of the same place. On August 4 a child was born to the couple, which fact was kept quiet by the parties concerned. During this time Lane was in Oklahoma and had not seen the infant. The child was born at the home of Mrs. Foster, mother of the girl, at whose house the couple resided. Dreading the sting of disgrace and consequent village gossip attending the event, Mrs. Foster maintained a silence of the birth, and during the two weeks the child remained in her home became very much attached to it.

Lane came to Ada from Oklahoma on August 19. He hired a team and buggy of J. W. Thompson and drove to Roff. Arriving there late at night he secretly brought away his wife and baby, driving towards Ada. When near the Abe Crow place, the unnatural mother carefully tucked the little one in a blanket, handed the tiny bundle to Lane who deposited it in the clump of bushes where it was found fifteen hours later.

Lane and his wife then came to Ada, left the team at the stable and took a room at the Byrd hotel. The next day they returned to Roff. When questioned by Mrs. Foster, the girl's mother, as to the whereabouts of the infant, both were dumb as oysters and refused to say a word on the subject. Having shielded her daughter in her disgrace Mrs. Foster could not make the disappearance of the infant public, but when she saw the account in the News of how a baby was found, the description of its clothing and the cost mark on the garments, she knew that the little one was of her blood and Tuesday phoned the officers here of the facts and asked that the couple be apprehended.

Lane was a witness in the Foster-Smathers case and came to Ada Tuesday morning. He was met at the train by Office Deputy Brents and placed under arrest. When confronted with the garments worn by the little foundling, and the evidence, he confessed to the crime.

Deputy Cummings then boarded the train for Roff and placed Mrs. Lane under arrest. When informed that her husband had confessed she corroborated his statement.

Lane was formerly in the employ of D. B. Bradshaw, a merchant of Roff, whose cost mark was found on the garments worn by the baby found.

At 4 o'clock the preliminary hearing of the couple began before Judge Wian. The youthful prisoners were terrified and when Mrs. Crow appeared with the baby in her arms Lane broke down and wept like a baby, while Mrs. Lane bore up more bravely.

The hearing is progressing as we go to press.

UNPRECEDENTED RAINFALL VISITS ADA TUESDAY NIGHT

With scarcely a drop of rain at Francis and the stars twinkling brightly all night at Mill Creek Ada people, Tuesday night, witnessed the heaviest fall of rain known to the oldest inhabitant. For nearly five hours the heavens wept copious tears, water came down in sheets, and at times one could scarcely discern an arc light 100 feet distant. The lightning played incessantly and the peals of thunder sounded not unlike the report of two mighty opposing armies.

Much danger resulted in the city. Every bridge on the branch in the western section of Ada was swept away save one, on North Broadway, and the approaches to it are such that vehicles cannot cross.

The electric light plant was put out of commission shortly after midnight. Water filled the belt pits thus loosening the cement holdings on the belts.

At the Frisco depot the water at one time was level with the platform and debris was piled up against the freight house.

NOTES OF THE STORM.

Thousands of sparrows were drowned. The ground in many places was literally covered with their bodies. S. W. Hill gathered nearly a bushel basket of the dead birds.

Lightning struck the homes of Lem Mitchell, W. T. Cox, James Perry and B. F. Liebert, but slight damage was done at each place.

Something over six inches of water found its way into the Harris hotel kitchen and dining room. The patrons of the house assisted in the bailing.

The family of C. H. Fisk, living on West Fourteenth street, were removed from the house as the water rose to the floor. Mr. Fisk waded through the flood up to his waist band.

The building of the Crystal Ice Cream Co., was flooded to a depth of twenty inches.

Parties living in a small green house just west of the Ada machine shop, had a narrow escape. Water rose to tops of the beds and the women and children were rescued from these positions.

Sandy, this forenoon, lacked two feet of being up to high water mark, but was rising rapidly at that time. Two bridges, one just completed a few days ago, are gone.

The flood was ten inches deep in John McKay's house.

ST. LOUIS PAYS HOMAGE TO THE GREAT COMMONER

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 12.—William J. Bryan received in St. Louis Tuesday the greatest of all the ovations which Missouri Democrats have tendered him in the last ten years.

Fifteen thousand persons packed the vast auditorium of the Coliseum at 8 o'clock and as many thousands clamored vainly outside for admission.

It was a sweltering, perspiring mass of humanity, but neither the jam nor the heat nor the manifold discomforts could lessen the ardor of their enthusiasm for the great commoner, returned once more to his own estate.

When Mr. Bryan appeared the great audience broke forth into cheers that even his magnetic hand was powerless to still. For full fifteen minutes the tumult continued. 15,000 throats, 30,000 hands and 10,000 flags affording such demonstration as the great Nebraskan has seldom received. National committeeman William A. Rothwell essayed in vain to make an introductory address. The cries of "Bryan! Bryan!" drowned his voice, and finally he was compelled to desist and allow Bryan to take the stage.

If there had been doubt as to Bryan's popularity in St. Louis it must have been dissipated today, for from the time he arrived at the Union Station at 7:30 until the time he retired to-night's appearance in St. Louis was one prolonged ovation. Mr. Bryan was followed by a cheering, howling crowd, which formed an informal procession and cheered him as he passed through the most strenuous day he has spent since his return to America.

OVERDRAFTS

It is becoming well known by business men that overdrafts, whether large or small, are not approved by the comptroller of the currency. The large central banks allow overdrafts only in a very small way, and this, it matters not how small, is not approved by the powers that be. This unbusinesslike habit of overdrafts grew out of advancing on moving products, such as cotton, grain and fat stock on the move. The overdraft system is wrong and the man whose account is always overdrawn is the man who spends more money than he makes and will finally have no bank account.

Indian Arbitrator Speaks of Weaver.

It is with great pleasure that we announce the fact that Carlton Weaver, of the Ada Daily and Weekly News, is a candidate for the office of delegate to the constitutional convention from the Eighty-seventh district, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

The subject of this sketch was born at Mt. Vernon, Texas, 25 years ago. He worked on his father's farm until he was 17 years of age, when he moved to the Territory, first locating at Pauls Valley, where he divided his time equally between school and farm work. In the summer of 1900 he moved to Ada, then an unincorporated village, and for a year was in the employ of Reed & Fuller, con. general merchants. During the following year, 1901, he did any kind of labor he could find to do, anything, in fact, that would assist him in keeping soul and body together, and it was in the fall of this year that the writer, who was then doing time on the Ada Star to the tune of $6 a week, had the pleasure of forming Mr. Weaver's acquaintance. At this particular time he was engaged at a lime kiln out west of town, but, after much persuasion and a long line of "hair castle" construction, induced him to lay aside his overalls and hickory shirt, don a pair of speckled trousers and a hat, and engage with us in the new paper business, which he did. The plant of the Ada Weekly News, which had recently been moved here to the Center, was purchased from the proprietor, A. E. Baker, of Pauls Valley, and it was during our connection with him in this enterprise that we formed of his harmoniously blended character, temperate habits and high moral qualities.

After 18 months had passed, he assumed sole control of the News, and under his management the enterprise grew and prospered. In September, 1904, his brother, Otis Weaver, assumed the management of the paper, and Carlton resigned a long cherished ambition to continue and finish his school work. He went to Indianapolis, Indiana, and matriculated in the university of that city. He had paid his fees and been properly enrolled, when a negro was admitted to the institution, and, of course, Weaver balked. He proclaimed his indignation from the house tops, denounced the school and its faculty, and caught the first train for Dixie, landing at the Kentucky University, where he entered and accomplished a most successful year's work, being unanimously selected as president of his class.

The following year he did not return to the state of his father's nativity, but entered the university of the new state in which he has cast his lot, at Norman, Oklahoma. At this place he was also awarded signal honor, being chosen president of his class of sixty-eight members during his first year. He was one of the two victorious debaters chosen from the university to represent Oklahoma in the Inter-collegiate Debate against Kansas last May. Oklahoma secured the unanimous decision.

During his university career he gave special attention to political science, economics and argumentation, and was the unanimous choice for the presidency of the well known Oklahoma State University Democratic club. As far as his Democracy is concerned, it cannot be questioned in the least, and at the present time he is serving as secretary of the Ada precinct Democratic club.

Mr. Weaver's declaration of principles, which appear in this issue, are open for inspection, and will stand the test of the most critical politician. He touches all the important issues in which most of the people are interested, and all have the clean, clear-cut ring. The story of his experience at Indianapolis, as related above, is sufficient evidence that he stands for a white man's government and would fight to the last ditch for separate schools, separate coaches and separate waiting rooms—three things that the Democracy of this country absolutely demand.

Mr. Weaver makes this race in response to a petition signed by a hundred or more staunch citizens of this city as well as the personal solicitation of a host of friends. His character needs no additional comment, for it is an open book. His life has been a ceaseless protest against the dominant tendencies of our contemporary era—the narrowing greed of gold, the relentless materialism, the decadence of courtesy in high places and the all prevailing secular and commercial standard. In regard to these cardinal points of a Christian civilization we believe that Mr. Weaver is able to comprehend the top-notch ideal of the voters of this district, and if selected as the Democratic nominee, the path of those who oppose him will be strewn with anything but roses.

BOGUS OR REAL REFORMERS?

There has been a good deal of controversy as to whether the present Administration leaders are bogus, or real reformers. The suspicion that Mr. Roosevelt has been playing reformer, while doing nothing to really control the trusts and corporations, rests on evidence that is quite strong enough to cause a grand jury to bring in a true bill. Reformers, like other people, must be judged by what they do, rather than by what they say or write.

Up to the present time the reforms attempted by Mr. Roosevelt are all "up in the air," they may materialize in the future, if he sticks to them manfully and does not back down when confronted with obstacles, as he has done in the tariff revision reform. He starts new political reforms constantly, but when the old party bosses show him that to carry these reforms out would split or disintegrate the G. O. P., Mr. Roosevelt gets discouraged and backs water.

But as a reformer of other than republican politics, Mr. Roosevelt is more stable, he has just ordered the introduction of spelling reform in his department of the government and as there will be no reason for the Republican politicians to object to that reform, for most of them are quite likely to spell in the phonetic way as by the rules of the dictionary, they will be glad to see Mr. Roosevelt amuse himself in that way instead of other reforms that are more dangerous to the party.

For instance, a sentence of the President's Message to Congress this fall may contain this: The brazen standpatters are common and harsh and should be suppressed for their wilful and for the frenzied fantasy of protection. I recommend that every dash, semicolon, be stripped of its woful and lachrymal injustice. If this account tariff is not discarded and let off at this session, the dash Democrats will have you whipt to a frazzle in the next Congress.

Now that is something like reform.

JESSE WARREN, Recorder.

Mr. OLIVER's prophecy that Ada people would yet be brought to their knees, was partially verified Tuesday night when people in the lower sections of the town spent some hours on their knees caking the cracks at the bottom of the doors.

If it rained forty days and forty nights during Noah's time, the people would not have been safe sitting on the moon had Jupiter Pluvius kept up his licks half the time as he did Tuesday night.

THE Ada city marshal should make a vigorous war on the tramp canines of this town, and this should be kept up until not one of the ravenous hyenas is left. They are of no more advantage to the city than rats and should be destroyed for the very same reason that rats are destroyed. It has become so that one is almost afraid to step out of the house after dark. The dog catcher should get busy.

ODD POINT IN AUTO CASE.

Relatives of Victim Hold Motorist Who Raised Dust Partly to Blame for Accident.

Paris.—A curious point in an action against a motor car driver came before the judges of the French chamber. It was a question as to whether a chauffeur who had raised dust could be proceeded against for homicide for carelessness.

On May 1 last an automobile passed a cyclist on the road between Melun and Paris. The car raised a cloud of dust, with the result that the cyclist could not see his way. His machine swerved, and he was overtaken by another motor car, which knocked him down and killed him.

Could the driver of the first car, which had raised a cloud of dust, be held responsible for the accident caused by the second car? The case came before the Corbell court, which imposed a fine of $200 on the driver of the second car, besides compelling him to pay $800 compensation. But the driver of the car which caused the dust to fly was acquitted, and his claim for $40 for being unjustifiably prosecuted was allowed against the family of the cyclist who was killed. This decision was appealed against.

BODY GIVEN TO COLLEGE.

Aged Convict's Request Carried Out by Prison Authorities at Michigan City, Ind.

Michigan City, Ind.—The body of the dead life convict, James Blackwood, who was the oldest inmate of the state prison, was taken to the Valparaiso college for dissection by the medical department.

Blackwood died in the prison hospital after serving 18 years behind the prison bars. He had been here since the transfer from Jeffersonville in 1887.

As Blackwood was dying there stood beside his cot James L. Myers, the murderer who was given a pardon by Gov. Hanly. Myers was found praying for the dying convict when the glad tidings of the pardon came to his ears.

Blackwood served 18 years for a murder in Clay county in 1887. All that remains of his family is a son residing in Texas. The son was notified after death, but made no reply.

The crime for which James Blackwood was sentenced occurred while a party was returning from a dance in Benwood, Clay county, to Cardonia. Blackwood quarreled with his wife. In the fight which followed the woman was knocked down and sustained four broken ribs. She was wrapped in a bundle of straw and left by the roadside, where she was found in the morning. She died soon after. Blackwood pleaded guilty and was sentenced by the late Judge Coffee, of Brazil.

RIGHT TO THE LETTER.

American Purchaser of Silver in London Is Served with Accuracy.

A New Yorker was once referring to the stolidity and literal-mindedness of the British shopkeeper, when he was reminded of an amusing experience of a friend in London, relates Success Magazine.

The American had been making several purchases in a jewelry establishment, among others a silver set, and noting that he had with him insufficient funds to defray the entire cost, he desired the clerk to send the set to his hotel, marked "C. O. D."

Due note was made by the clerk; but when the articles arrived at the hotel the purchaser was surprised to find that no charges had been collected. Opening the package the American was dumfounded to discover that each piece of silver had been carefully engraved, in a beautiful monogram, "C. O. D."

The Ten Virgins.

Evangelist Trimble spoke on the parable of the Ten Virgins at the Christian church Tuesday night. He made it plain to his hearers that the parable applies directly to church members. He said in substance:

"This scripture does not say that the kingdom of Heaven shall be like the five wise virgins, and the outside world like the five foolish. The kingdom, the church, is likened unto the five foolish as much as unto the five wise virgins. 'The foolish virgins at one time were ready for the coming of the bridegroom, but did not continue in a state of preparation. They sought oil, not because their lamps had never been lighted, but because they had gone out. This parable is given to teach us that we may be ready at one time in our lives, and wholly without preparation when death comes.

"While this parable applies directly to church members, I want to say a few words to those who have never been ready. 'You are all going forth. The meeting is inevitable. You all expect to enjoy the great feast that God has prepared for you. The greatest tragedy ever enacted in the human heart, will be enacted when one who said as a boy, Heaven shall be my home, and said it again as a young man, and as an old man the e was still a ray of hope but when he comes before the Judge to hear that awful sentence, every ray of hope will be swept away.

"That that made an unfortunate rich man more unfortunate than anything else was the memo of unimproved opportunities. He called for one to be sent from the dead to tell his brethren just what he had to have told them. When the Lord calls upon us to remember, may there be no memories of evil deeds, of unimproved opportunities to disturb us for an eternity."

Will Play in Own Back Yard.

Oklahoma City, Ok., Sept. 12.—The Oklahoma and Indian Territory Republican executive committee held a conference Tuesday for the purpose of amalgamating the two committees. The Oklahoma committee appointed a committee of three to wait on Indian Territory to consider the amalgamation. The Indian Territory committee agreed to amalgamation if given the chairmanship. This was refused, and it was decided to postpone any further action along this line until after the constitutional convention.

Charles Filson, on account of being territorial secretary resigned the chairmanship of the Oklahoma committee and was succeeded by Jake Hamon, of Lawton. About one hundred distinguished politicians are attracted here as a result of the conference.

THE HISTORY OF POLICEMAN FLYNN

HE RAIDS A "FENCE."
(Copyright, by The Century Co.)
(Copyright, 1904, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Great was the day that Policeman Barney Flynn raided a "fence." But, of course, he never would have done it if he had not been properly prompted by his wife. Like many another man, Policeman Flynn does not go out hunting for trouble and work, and it takes a certain amount of feminine sarcasm and criticism to make him even reasonably ambitious. But once roused to action, there is no man on "th' force" who can surpass him in either resourcefulness or nerve.

"Oho! I've found a fence," he announced joyously to his wife one night. "What'll ye do with it?" demanded Mrs. Flynn.

"What'll I do with it?" repeated Policeman Flynn. "What d'ye suppose? Is it ye or idee that I'll give it ye fr to put r-round ye or ga-ar-den? 'T is a strange conception ye ha-ave iv me official juteas an' th' worries iv me daily toll. I pray-some ye think 't is a shone face with flagree wor-ck on th' fr'n gate, but ye're wr-rong. This fence is a pla-ace where sholen goods is sego-shated fr ha-ar-d cash."

"Did ye have thim at th' station?" asked Mrs. Flynn.

"Lave what?" inquired Policeman Flynn. "Th' goods?"

"No; th' min. They's min that r-runs th' fence, iv coorse. Did ye get thim?"

"Ye'd like fr to be a widdy, w'd ye?" retorted Policeman Flynn, somewhat warmly. "Ye'd like to ha-ave me for a farnat tin or twelve despr't min an' come home lukkin' like a Fourth-July ta-target in a shootin'-gal'ry, so's ye c'd put on ye-er black dress an' ha-ave ivery wan ca-as'tin' eyes at ye an' sayin', 'There goes th' widdy iv th' bra-ave po-li-man that was plantad aw-ay with siviln pounds iv lead in him.' But I'll not give ye th' chance. I'll rap-poor th' fac's at r-roll call an' lave th' cap't'n plan th' raid."

"Ha-and over th' gun ye're carryin', Barney," said Mrs. Flynn, with decision.

"Fr why?" asked Policeman Flynn. "Ye don't need it," answered his wife, with infinite sarcasm. "'T is you that knows too well: how to ta-ake care iv ye-er self ivver to ha-ave call fr a gun."

"I Wint Down the Chute Like a Hod iv Brick."

Policeman Flynn winced, but he too well knew the danger and difficulties of such a raid to be readily brought to his wife's view of the matter.

"'T w'd be like takin' wan's own life fr to go in there alone," he protested.

"Surpr-rise thim," advised Mrs. Flynn. "Ye know they's a fence there, ye know they's min comes there to lave goods, ye know th' man-an that sa-anda thim behind th' ba-ars 'll be mentioned in th' po-li orders an' 'll be a gr-rat man-an at th' station, an' ye know ye'll never be heard if ye let come wan ilse do th' wor-ck. 'T is fr you to ma-ake a showin' fr ye-er self."

"'T is a post-mortim showin' I'd be ma-akin' fr meself," returned the policeman, ruefully. "Ye don't undher-shta-and th' case. 'T is not th' fence alone, but th' gang that laves th' goods there, that's to be r-rounded up, an' 't is a despr't cr-r-owd. 'T is only me juty to me scooper-ivy officer to rap-poor in a case like this."

"'T is ye-er juty to ye-er self to show ye're a po-li-man with a head on ye," teased Mrs. Flynn.

"To prove I ha-ave a head on me 't is necessary fr to ha-ave it blowed off," commented Policeman Flynn, lugubriously.

"If ye ha-aven't th' injinoo-ity to save it, 'tis better so," asserted Mrs. Flynn. "Don't ye lever let thim ana-art day-tivities get th' cr-red-rit fr ye-er wor-ck. Barney Flynn, or I'll believe ye're not Irish at all, but only a Po-lack or some other furnier."

With this the subject was temporarily dropped; but Policeman Flynn knew that he had to do that particular job himself in order to have peace in the family, and Mrs. Flynn knew that he would do it and do it well. He did not report his discovery at the station, but devoted his spare time to further

THE VINES FOR HOT PLACES.

Some Veritable Salamanders Do Well on Western and Southern Exposures

The western and southern side of a building is a rather trying position for any kind of plant, especially a vine, but some there are which seem veritable salamanders in their ability to stand unscathed such a hot location.

Among these indoors and out recommends certain of the moon flowers, notably Ipomoea pandurata, which is said to be able to withstand a year's drought without injury. The foliage is attractive, and it bears an immense quantity of creamy white flowers of a thick, waxy texture. Once established it covers an immense amount of space and for this reason should be given liberal room when planting.

Another vine which thrives in hot, sunny situations is the Cobaea scandens. This, while not hardy, being started each spring from seed sown in house or hotbed, is so rapid a grower that it will cover quite as much space as a perennial vine. When grown on a stone wall or on trees the tendrils cling to anything within reach.

The blossoms are large and gloxinia-like and change in color from the greenish white of the newly opened flower through shades of lavender, mauve and purple as the flowers develop, ending at last in the deepest wine ere the flower fades.

When the period of bloom is over the flowers fall, so that there are never any withered ones on the vine.

When grown on porches or wood it should be provided with twine or wire netting for support. It should be well watered in hot, dry weather, but during damp weather should not receive any water. An occasional drink of liquid manure during the blooming period will be of benefit.

If desired its roots may be taken up in the fall and wintered over in the conservatory or greenhouse, where they will continue in bloom during the winter and may be planted out again during summer. The seeds of the Cobaea are much addicted to decay and in planting they should be placed in the soil sideways and kept only moderately moist.

WHAT TO TAKE TO A PICNIC.

And How to Pack, So Food Will Not Be Mussy.

Deviled eggs go well with cold meat when they have not been used in salad; plain hard boiled eggs are in different eating, and these will repay the little trouble it takes to prepare them. Cut in two, remove the yolk and mash it with salt and pepper and a little dry mustard; wet with a little vinegar, and replace, pressing the two halves together; roll each egg in paraffin paper.

If there are no olives in your salad, take a bottle of these, but pour off the brine and rinse them, putting them dry in the bottle and corking them. Pimentos, little mangoes, chowchow, and all the different relishes taste better than usual in the open air, but one or two kinds are enough to take.

The sandwiches for the picnic should be made of something not too dry, directs a contributor to the Chicago Tribune. Lettuce spread with French dressing or mayonnaise will come out perfectly moist and fresh. Baked sardines, wet with lemon juice, finely chopped cucumbers with French dressing, thin bread and butter, brown or white, spread with caviare, cream cheese mixed with whipped cream, chopped watercress and simple bread and butter spread with mayonnaise or tartare sauce are all delightfully appetizing. Sweet sandwiches always seem out of place at a picnic, but if you wish a few, make them with orange marmalade or raspberry jam, using only a little for fear they may become wet with the juice.

A freezer of ice cream always is a refreshing last course at a picnic, incongruous as it may seem. Peach surprise is something of a novelty, and it is a good time in the year to offer it. Peel, cut up, and mash the peaches to a pulp, and sweeten them well. Then to a quart of these take the whites of five eggs, and turn them in without beating. Freeze solid, remove the dasher, pack the fruit down smoothly, and cover the freezer with ice and salt. There is no danger of the ice melting in the transportation.

Give Baby Freedom.

Baby, when placed upon his back upon a rug, will soon show mamma his own ideas about athletics. If his clothing is not too tight he will wave his little legs and arms in the air, and kick and sprawl in great delight. This is excellent for the muscles, and baby will show his appreciation of it by his evident pleasure in the little gymnastics he performs. For the first two or three years of baby's life a morning warm bath is given by many wise mothers. The child should be fed about half an hour before the bath. The temperature should be 95 degrees Fahrenheit in winter and about 90 degrees Fahrenheit in summer. Use a bath thermometer for estimating the temperature, since it is difficult otherwise to gauge it with accuracy.

Summer Wall Papers.

Summer wall papers are particularly fascinating this year. One is a mass of water lilies and leaves—no stems and no background, just a mass of yellow flowers and broad, green leaves. One of the coolest-looking of the summer papers has a deep "crown," showing white swans in blue water, in which tall, slender lilies are growing. The side walls below this two-foot crown are hung with a white paper almost covered with a network of reeds and iris leaves without the flowers.

THE OTHER CAPTAIN TENNANT

BY LOUIS TRACY.

(Copyright, 1904, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

A hansom darted out of the station, and the occupants, two sun-tanned men, stamped with the cavalry seal, each clutched at a window-rest and exchanged smiles of quick understanding.

"Great Scott!" cried the major, "it's good to be back in God's country after two and a half years in the Philippines! Look at the girls in muslin! Jimmy, let's charter the hansom for the afternoon and go round, and see things!"

His excitement met with no response. Glancing at his companion, he suddenly checked the further outburst on his lips.

"What's up, Jimmy? No bad news, I hope?"

"Bad news! I have had none at all."

"Faith! there's plenty of good fish in the sea. Believe me, Jimmy, there is safety in numbers. I have run after women all my life and never caught one yet, so I have had all the sport and none of the worry."

Tennant agreed with him. He was in no mood for discussion, nor did his friend's cynical badinage appeal to him at the moment.

At last, when the major had gone off to a club Tennant stood irresolutely in the foyer of his hotel whilst pride and common sense wrestled for supremacy.

Pride said: "Why trouble your soul about a woman who has utterly ignored you for six long months, and now treats your homecoming with absolute indifference? Give her no further heed."

But common sense whispered: "Find out the truth before you decide. You would have trusted Elsie Stapleton with your life, your future, your honor. Do not now condemn her unheard."

He was a hard man and an obstinate one. Not readily, nor yet in stunted measure had he bestowed his love, and the causeless, merciless abandonment to which he had been subjected had seared his heart. Nevertheless, pride went under in the struggle, and he started forth to ascertain from the lady herself why he no longer found favor in her sight.

When he reached the lady's house, she was not there; indeed no one knew where she was. Her father had given up the house eight months ago, and in New York, where no man knows his next door neighbor, the interval opposed a blank wall against further inquiry. It struck him as a small coincidence that at the period of this change of residence he was in the wildest part of the Philippines and temporarily incapacitated from writing home. Letters from Elsie, breathing love and hope, continued to reach him by devious routes for some weeks. Then—silence!

Being a determined man, he interviewed local tradesmen, policeman, post office officials, and finally a doctor. Here he found a clue. Yes, exactly eight months ago, Miss Elsie Stapleton, suddenly became very ill—received a shock, he believed, by unexpected news concerning a friend in the Philippines, and was taken abroad by her father. The girl was dangerously ill.

Abashed with uncertainty, Tennant went back to his hotel. A man awaited his arrival, an army officer, like himself, and it was sufficiently amazing to read on the stranger's card: "Capt. J. W. Tennant."

"I have been chasing you round the world," he explained. "My business is important. Can we have a quiet talk somewhere?"

Jimmy led his namesake to a sitting-room. Here the other Capt. Tennant seated himself, lit a cigarette, and produced an envelope.

"Do you recognize the handwriting?" he said.

Jimmy required no second glance. It was Elsie's.

"How the deuce did this come into your possession?" he demanded, fiercely.

"Hold on! This affair may have caused you some trouble, but not half so much as it has given me. Now, just sit still and listen. My name happens to be John Watson Tennant. My wife, whom I recently married, and who was a millionaire's widow, happens to be extremely jealous. She collects my correspondence. I don't mind, as I thought all the letters would be from duns. I didn't count on receiving love-letters, and devilish well-written ones at that, from a young lady named Elsie. By Jove! didn't she make it hot for me? Never a word did she let on, though, for I should have discovered the mistake at once. To her there was only one J. W. Tennant in existence, and she did not believe me when I showed her your name in the army list. I must admit that the last letter appeared to justify her suspicions."

"The last letter?"

"Yes, I am awfully sorry for you, old man, but I couldn't help it. Miss Elsie evidently saw an account of my marriage in some papers and thought it was yours, as you had not written to her for some weeks. Then the fat was in the fire—with my wife, I mean. Since that document reached her she has made my life a misery, compelled me to leave the service, pays all the bills, never gives me a red cent, and alternately ties me to her apron string and threatens divorce proceedings."

"Give me . . . my letters!" gasped Jimmy.

The other man laughed discordantly.

"I am almost in the divorce court for demanding even an envelope," he cried. "My wife sleeps on them, and reads them twice a day whenever she thinks I am wheeling her a bit. Now, if you feel equal to it, come with me to my hotel and try all you know to persuade her that Elsie belongs to you, and not to me."

The persuasion took a form that the rich and elderly Mrs. Tennant was not accustomed to. It amounted and gratified her happy-go-lucky husband to see the way in which she quailed before Jimmy's wrath. The latter walked straight into her palatial suite and thrust some old and frayed letters before her eyes.

"You have some of my correspondence in your possession," he said, with an intensity of passion that cowed her instantly. "They are letters written to me by a Miss Elsie Stapleton. You will recognize her handwriting. Will you give them to me quietly, or must I take them by force?"

"John!" she shrieked, "protect me!"

"Darling," said her better half, "I am helpless. This is the other Capt. J. W. Tennant. You refused to believe me, ducky, when I assured you—"

"Do you hear, woman?" growled Jimmy. "Your miserable jealousy has entangled, perhaps wrecked, the happiness of two people who never imagined that such a creature as you could come between them. Give me my letters, or by the bones of my martyred first husband, I will—"

That was enough. She produced a crumpled packet from the bosom of her dress. Without a word of apology or further comment, Jimmy stood where he was and read the blurred lines, for the lady had wept hot tears over them, and the paper was almost in tatters. The silly mistake which might yet have a tragic ending was quickly revealed. Elsie had indeed seen in a newspaper an account of the marriage, and her lover's prolonged silence at that unhappy juncture forced her to the conclusion that he had killed her. Her last little note of farewell wrung his heart in agony.

It was a long and difficult search for ten days. Jimmy's chief difficulty was that the only persons who knew the Stapletons' whereabouts regarded him as an unprincipled scoundrel, and refused to see him. Then he found the

"SOMEHOW," SOBBED THE GIRL, "I NEVER REALLY DOUBTED YOU."

His aunt, and the woman knew that this story was true. She told him that Elsie, who had been near to death, was slowly recovering her health in Florida.

He went there by the next steamer, and with him traveled Mr. and Mrs. Tennant—the latter most unwillingly, but shamed now into submission to her lord and master. With a soldier's strategy the leader of mounted infantry first captured Elsie's father and made him listen to reason. Then it was thought advisable that the dame should be forced to go and tell her story to Elsie, and thus prepare her for the coming of her lover.

She played her part honestly, but with whimpers. She happened, too, to hear what Elsie said when Jimmy took her in his arms.

"Somehow," sobbed the girl, "I never really doubted you. I read a description of this woman—and saw her photograph—and then I thought that fever or hardship had affected your brain."

By succeeding mails from the Philippines came batches of Jimmy's correspondence, returned through the dead letter office, and Elsie enjoyed reading them, now that they were married, a great deal more than if he were still in the far east.

The two Tennants occasionally play bridge together at the same club, but the two Mrs. Tennants will never be real friends, though they meet at times.

WHEN STEAM WAS NEW POWER

First Boats Using It Were Considered Something Remarkable.

When the Lusitania took its first plunge into the waters of the Clyde it could have carried unseen on a corner of its deck the first steamship built in Britain. The Clyde claims both as its offspring. The Comet, constructed by Mr. Henry Bell, flashed its four shovel-shaped paddle on each of its four wheels in the year 1812, and carried on its deck of 40 feet by 10 as many passengers as its three horse-power could negotiate. The Comet was so conspicuously successful that two or three more boats of a larger capacity were immediately built, and the citizens of Glasgow became the envy of mankind. Mr. Lawrence, of Bristol, determined that England should not be left behind in the race, tried one on the Severn, and was so delighted with the result that he steamed with it up the Thames, intending to reap a harvest from city men on their way to and from business. He overlooked the company of Watermen, who made such a fuss about this inhuman competition that Mr. Lawrence and his steamship fell back to the Severn. From 1813 to 1823 no vessel was built in Britain of a greater tonnage than 500, the average being only about 60. The Lusitania of those days was the Atlas, described by the contemporary press as the "largest vessel ever built." She was impelled, says an enthusiastic reporter, by "three mighty engines of 100 horse-power each." This gigantic vessel (which could be stowed away quite comfortably in the hold of the Lusitania), was built at Rotterdam, and launched in the summer of 1828.

Money for Cattle, None for Babies.

These college professors may not be so very far ahead of future legislation. We spend through Washington now $7,000,000 a year in developing plant life, but not a dollar to discover a preventative of pneumonia. In ten years the department of agriculture has expended nearly $50,000,000 in developing products of the soil, but there is no bureau with money for the development of the more than 1,000,000 infants every year. It is true that Dr. Wiley, Atwater and Benedict have done wonderful work, but within a limited sphere, in the preservation of infant life. While they have worried for a little money to carry on experiments, a million has gone in stamping out cholera among swine. Prof. Norton estimates that during the next census period more than 6,000,000 of infants under two years of age must succumb, yet with proper knowledge of preventable diseases this number could be cut in two.

American Poetry.

American poetry is occasional, not professional; something aside from the day's work, instead of being the day's work.

Browning wrote a poem a day for a stated period, applying his every working hour to the task undertaken. Browning is an example of a professional poet. We cannot boast of such an example.

John Burroughs boasts of only one poem called "Waiting." Hawthorne and Webster wrote two or three poems. Cooper wrote three.

Bryant had a day's work to do in a newspaper office, as did Eugene Field, while Emerson had lectures to deliver. Sidney Lanier was a flute player in a Baltimore orchestra.

Joaquin Miller is writing poems while he plows—like Burns.

Billiards at Sea.

"Can you imagine playing billiards in a heavy gale?" said the captain. "Do you wonder that our new liners, with their elevators and telephones and gymnasium, don't have billiard tables as well? One ship once had a billiard table—the Great Eastern."

"The wonderful Great Eastern had a billiard table on a swinging deck. This deck was supposed to counteract the ship's motion, and to keep the table steady. But it failed to do so, and very remarkable were some of the shots made on the Great Eastern's table in rough weather."

"Nevertheless, the table was kept for years, and was a popular institution aboard the big boat. But no other, boat before or since has ever bothered to introduce billiards."

Great Singer Offered Job.

One day Mme. Calve was being shown over a famous grotto, when suddenly she thought of Gluck's opera, and began singing the first act. The boy who acted as guide listened appreciatively. When she had finished he remarked: "If you want and asked the proprietor if you might sing here while people are being shown the place, I think he would pay you well." "How much do you think he would pay me?" asked Mme. Calve, without a smile. The boy gravely considered the question. "About five francs, perhaps, a day," he answered after a little pause, and the singer agreed with him that it was good pay.

Denatured Women.

It is said that some of the club women of New York complain of the way in which the parks of that city are littered up by parties of children. No doubt such complaints have been made, for there are sticky women everywhere, but we doubt if the whole burden of the attempt to block the childish fun should be laid at the door of the club women, who are often the objects of unjust criticism. We should rather suspect that the idea originated with those denatured women, whether members of clubs or not, who sport dogs instead of children.
